LONG POND — The highways belonged to the young and now they are going home.

An estimated 150,000 made it inside the gates of Pocono International Raceway Saturday for a 12 hour, 14 group concert — probably the most financially successful rock festival ever held.

But with total draw estimates running as high as 200,000, the event triggered probably the worst traffic jam in the area's history, stalling cars for miles on Interstate Route 60, Route 940 and 115 and backing them in to New Jersey along Route 46.

Traffic was so snarled by 2 p.m. Saturday that four late arrivals dropped in by parachute, avoiding the two-hour hike from the nearest available parking space.

Early arrivals Thursday and Friday pitched tents and unrolled sleeping bags around the rim of the track.

Extensive plans to cope with the onslaught collapsed despite state police efforts and the presence of 500 raceway marshals. Concert-goers parked their cars along the roads and lawns leading to the track.

Few disorders were reported, but many fenders took a dent along the car-lined pavement narrowing into the raceway.

"We had a beautiful plan to get traffic in smoothly," Dr. Joseph R. Matoli, board chairman and chief executive of the raceway said. He said he felt badly about the cars parked on lawns.

Tickets were sold out Friday after eight months of planning and promotion, but still thousands swarmed to the raceway after being told on the radio no one would be admitted without a ticket.

Of the 150,000 who actually made it to the infield, estimates say 20,000 were gate-crashers. First aid stations handled many who cut themselves on the fence.

Also treated at the center were burns from campfires, swollen feet, minor cuts and scrapes and a number of "bad trips" from drug use. Drugs flowed freely at the event.

The scent of marijuana was everywhere in the crowd as pipes and rolled joints passed swiftly in the wall-to-wall humanity. Sales of LSD and amphetamines took place in the full view of hundreds, but no arrests were reported at the raceway.

Drug marshals in the field relayed messages by walkie-talkie and waded into the tightly packed crowd near the stage when problems were reported.

One of the 85-member medical department flown to the site on the first helicopter to the raceway, later reported most bad trips were caused by the fact someone was pushing "bad stuff."

The more seriously stricken were flown into the General Hospital of Monroe County on a 10-minute shuttle arranged to get groups and medical personnel in and out of the track.

Much of the area was strewn with bottles, beer cans and paper debris. Promoters of the event, Concert 10 of

New York City, said they would distribute 50,000 plastic bags and ask patrons to clean up the track grounds as they left. No mention was made of the needed clean-up in woods surrounding the raceway where thousands had camped the night before the concert.

However successful the self-help clean up may be the festive thousands, wearied early Saturday night, once again took their parade to the highways — this time going the other way to New Jersey, New York, Virginia, Delaware, Colorado.

Route 115 was flowing steadily southbound by 9 p.m. And by 2 a.m. Route 80 was one long light brigade in a dense fog. Only after coming within a few yards of ripping them from their perch along the roadsides, could drivers make out the forms of hitchhikers in the early morning cover.

Still, hundreds were braving the possibility of being hit in order to get home before another snarl, or to return to work on time this morning in Virginia.

Or maybe it is just a long way to the next concert and they needed an early start.

Fans leave garbage pile

LONG POND — The aftermath of Concert 10 soured another sense Sunday as mounds of garbage rotted under a hazy sun.

"It's a different civilization. They're animals," bit off Capt. Andre Azemar, of Interstate Security Police Inc.

While the crowd was termed "orderly and polite" by Bill Marvel, manager of the Pocono International Raceway, he conceded it would take two weeks to clear the area.

The track infield looked like a landfill site as broken bottles, matted blankets and watermelon rinds leered about empty plastic garbage bags — provided by the raceway at the concert's end.

Only a handful of the audience remained in the afternoon, scuffling through dust and debris to find lost possessions.

They were outnumbered by local residents who came to look and were appalled at the sight. "It's a disgrace to the Poconos. Don't even ask us what we think," said a middle-aged couple with a summer home in Tunkhannock Township.

Police said crowd retaining wires were sliced in about 30 places. A half-dozen holes were reported to have been burned in the track from campfires, kindled by slats off the pit wall.

"They all talk about ecology," said a state trooper. "But I've never seen anything like this."

Crews ripped nails from the Woodstock-styled stage, where only the day before musicians were greeted by a sea of faces. The maintenance men were greeted by a sea of trash.

Track officials didn't seem too concerned about the litter, however, and called the largest gathering in the Poconos a tremendous success — an opinion shared by most of those attending.

Stating the grounds would be cleared by time for trials for the Schaefer 500, Marvel said first day clean-up was aided by about 100 Boy Scouts who scoured the woodlands.

He declined to comment on the cost of the cleaning, but indicated a healthy profit would be garnered in any event. Marvel did say, however, the raceway's estimated 150,000 fans caused about "four times" as much litter as last year's Schaefer 500 crowd.

He attributed this to the size of the crowd, and at the same time, praised state policemen for their traffic control.

Marvel said raceway officials estimated a crowd of 100,000 would attend and added police did "a tremendous job under the circumstances."

Local residents complaining about property damage "will be the same ones who will benefit from the $60,000 tax," he contended, referring to Tunkhannock Township's amusement levy.

Contrasting with Marvel's remarks were those by a state policeman at the Fern Ridge substation, who claimed massive problems were caused by the concert. He cited a rock hurled through the substation's window, arrests for burglarly and rampant drug use.

Raceway marshals had no love for the crowd either, saying groups hurdled retaining walls, snipped fences and broke into concession stands.

Marvel said fence work was "negligible" and believed "the entire event worked out better than we thought it would."

McGovern prods Muskie

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — Uncertain whether the convention's rules will hurt or help them, George S. McGovern's forces pressured Edmund S. Muskie Sunday night to give them his critical support in tonight's all-important California showdown.

The front-running South Dakota senator's strategists were at first angered, then encouraged and finally confused about their chances of winning a crucial Democratic convention floor test under procedural rules set by party chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien.

A spokesman for Hubert H. Humphrey, arch rival of McGovern who is fighting to deny him a first ballot nomination on the basis of the California test, cried foul when the rules were announced.

The upshot after a long afternoon of doubt and confusion was that the bitterly divided Democratic party was headed toward one of the most dramatic confrontations in its turbulent, 140-year history when its convention opens at 7:30 p.m. E.D.T. today.

Not long after the first gavel falls, a nationwide radio-television audience will see the delegates dispose of opening session business and settle down for a long night that may well decide McGovern's fate.

At stake are 151 of the 271 California delegates McGovern won in that state's June 6 winner-take-all primary, only to be stripped from him by the party's Credentials Committee.

Humphrey is battling to have the convention — with help from a stop-McGovern coalition — uphold the Credentials Committee's division of the California results among all the primary candidates. This would deprive McGovern of 151 while Humphrey would gain at least 104.

The outcome could determine the nomination.

With Muskie's help and a claim to the full California delegation, McGovern forces figure they will have broken through to an early presidential nomination Wednesday night.

MIAMI — The Pennsylvania State delegates to the Democratic National Convention in Miami haggled for seven hours in both full and individual delegation meetings Sunday without coming to any agreement on a state delegation chairman.

Former Pennsylvania Governor William Leader was offered in nomination by Humphrey delegates while Muskie and McGovern delegates backed Robert P. (Pop) the Leader and Lawrence administrations.

The organizational caucus of the full delegation was delayed more than three hours to 11 p.m. Sunday by individual candidate caucus meetings. State Chairman Harvey Thiemann recessed the organizational caucus until noon today.

Bombers blast N. Viets

SAIGON — Nine waves of U.S. B52 bombers dropped nearly 700 tons of explosives on suspected North Vietnamese troop positions south and west of Quang Tri City Sunday night and this morning, including one raid on targets only one mile from the northernmost province capital. The raids began shortly after South Vietnamese paratroopers launched their first attacks to clear Communist troops from the province capital and engaged its defenders in intense fighting, field reports said.

IRA ends truce; 5 killed

BELFAST — The militant Provisional wing of the outlawed Irish Republican Army (IRA) Sunday night called off its 13-day-old ceasefire and resumed full-scale attacks on British troops in cities and towns across violence-wracked Northern Ireland. At least five civilians, including a 14-year-old girl and a man of 60, died in gunbattles that raged across Belfast. Four other men were hospitalized with gunshot wounds. With the four men shot earlier in what appeared to be execution-type slayings, the toll for the 24-hour period that ended shortly after midnight rose to nine dead and brought to 415 the number killed in almost three years of political and sectarian violence in the northern province.

Democrats dent debt

MIAMI BEACH — The Democratic Party's fund-raising telethon was hailed a big success Sunday night when contributors pledged $4.5 million in contributions to ease its red-ink burden. John Y. Brown Jr., board chairman of Kentucky Fried Chicken who masterminded the 20-hour live television solicitation of donations to help reduce the party's $9.3 million debt, said that he expected the total collected to run well over $5 million.

Convention delegates look like they're going off cliff

By ARLEN J. LARGE
Dow Jones-Ottaway News

MIAMI BEACH — The folks gathering here for the Democratic convention seem to have something special in common, according to a party functionary who has been watching them. "They look like a bunch of people standing around before they jump off a cliff," he says.

The delegates step apprehensively off the edge with tonight's opening gavel. When the business is over next Thursday, the Democratic party may lie shattered in ruins for years to come. Or, less disastrously, it may build new inner strength to rebound after a loss this year. Conceivably, of course, it might instead be moving toward a miraculous victory over President Nixon in November.

"I'm looking forward to a happy week," Sen. George McGovern told an old folks' rally here over the weekend. But up the row of sugary-white resort hotels at McGovern's headquarters, his young campaign staffers reflect grim resentment at the alliance of other candidates and organized labor that could ruin their "happy week" even if the South Dakota is nominated.

Waiting for move
"Many of us have waited for months to see how they would try to take the nomination away from us, and now it's happening," one bitter young McGovern worker says. "Even if we win, it takes the edge off. I just hope that some of these people come to their senses and realize they're on the verge of wrecking the party."

To his determined enemies, of course, it is the "radical" Sen. McGovern who is threatening to wreck the party with his divisive positions on welfare, defense, spending and amnesty for draft dodgers. "His stands have been so far-out, and that's why he's in trouble, that's why he's hit this stone wall," says Sen. Henry Jackson of Washington, who still hopes something will turn up to bring the nomination his way.

"McGovern isn't talking about creating new wealth, he's talking about redistributing it," complains Sen. Vance Hartke of Indiana, who hopes Hubert Humphrey wins the nomination after the second ballot. "That scares even the middle-income people, who just don't want to level everybody down to living in a $6,000 trailer."

Douglas Auerand is a 30-year-old Illinois delegate still pledged to Sen. Edmund Muskie, who is angling to become the front-runner once again after three ballots or so. Like many others here, Auerand fears a downward tug of the McGovern coattails on the party's local candidates. "If we top the ticket with McGovern, it would be disastrous," he says.

Have reservations
Muskie delegate Severin Beliveau, Maine's Democratic state chairman, concurs from his vantage point as chairman of an association of all the other state chairmen: "Many of them have reservations about McGovern's impact on local, country, legislative and congressional races."

All this plus the active hostility of George Meany's AFL-CIO has halted the McGovern momentum built up by last month's primary triumphs in California and New York. McGovern has had little good news since, and in adversity he has said things about possibly bolting the party that have given his foes fresh ammunition.

Although the senator's own threats about a third-party revolt have been cautious, his most fervent followers don't appear in any mood to tolerate any other nominee; they even rule out Sen. Ted Kennedy. One McGovern staffer fumes: "If they perform this rape, they aren't going to be able to come back to us and say, 'Here's Kennedy — you'll love him.' Our people won't buy it. They'll walk out."

Last week Sen. McGovern hoped that some of the anger on both sides would be calmed by a U.S. Court of Appeals giving him back 151 of the original 271 delegates he won in the California primary; the party Credentials Committee, dominated by an anti-McGovern coalition, had endangered his nomination by distributing these 151 delegates among the other candidates. But on Friday evening the U.S. Supreme Court ruled 6 to 3, that the judiciary shouldn't mix in political-party scraps, and that the convention delegates could come to McGovern's rescue if they decided he had been robbed.

Little success
Last night efforts were being made to work out credentials compromises, but there wasn't any sign of success.

So the big rescue scene will be played on the convention floor tonight, involving not only McGovern's 151 ousted Californians but also 59 exiled Illinoisians controlled by Chicago's Mayor Richard Daley. The televised drama continues Tuesday night on party platform disputes in which Alabama Gov. George Wallace has a suspenseful role, and the presidential nomination itself is to be settled Wednesday night.

If McGovern does win the party nomination he will have a stupendous job of convincing other Democrats that he won't carry them all out of office in November. One union source, pressed for specific examples of the McGovern threat, warns of the loss of four house seats in Michigan and two in Connecticut.

Anticipating McGovern's nomination, Democrats in the Tennessee legislature have established their own separate reelection campaign staff to shield them from national-party fallout. Besides McGovern's controversial positions on issues, other Democrats worry about "kidnash" — or resentment against his long-haired and sometimes scruffy young supporters.

To McGovern, the campaigners all overlook what he considers a popular demand for political change that carried him this far. As for his youth-based organization,

McGovern Sunday called it the "broadest and strongest" ever seen. Speaking on NBC's "Meet The Press," he pointedly added: "That organization is going to be at the service of every Democrat running this year from the courthouse to the White House."

Some Democrats here who have little hope of capturing the White House this year nevertheless think that the party's efforts to get a broader cross section of convention delegates builds strength for the future. Almost 90 per cent of the delegates here are attending their first convention, including those both for and against McGovern.

Robert Allen, a 32-year-old uncommitted delegate from Arizona, thinks it only natural that things get a little brisk. "The first-time-type delegates on both sides are taking up their roles with enthusiasm, and it becomes emotional," he says. "It's like two lawyers going into a courtroom for the first time."

Blasts Hanoi stand

HHH raps McGovern

MIAMI BEACH (UPI)—Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey sharply criticized Sen. George S. McGovern Sunday for saying he would be willing to go to Hanoi and "beg" for the release of U.S. prisoners of war. "I wouldn't beg here, in Hanoi or anywhere," said Humphrey.

"I do not believe the word beg represents sound morality," Humphrey said. "I think it's unfortunate that Sen. McGovern used that term. There is a difference between tough negotiations and begging. I'm not a beggar."

The Minnesota senator was one of five presidential candidates interviewed on a special two-hour Meet the Press program on NBC on the eve of the opening of the convention.

While denouncing McGovern for his willingness to "beg," Humphrey conceded that he had softened his position on peace negotiations with the North Vietnamese. "Times have changed, the attitude of the people has changed, the attitude of the President has changed," he explained.

Humphrey defended his challenge of the California winner-take-all primary rule, which gave McGovern all 271 delegate votes, although he collected only 44 per cent of the vote.

That meant, said Humphrey, that 56 per cent of California's primary voters would be "disenfranchised" under the winner-take-all rule. The party's Credentials Committee has upset the winner-take-all rule and apportioned the delegates on popular vote and the full convention must settle the dispute tonight.

Slate of McGovern, Woodcock?

MIAMI BEACH (UPI)—Frontrunner George S. McGovern, convinced he will win the Democratic presidential nomination, said Sunday he was considering reaching outside politics for a running mate. He specifically mentioned United Auto Workers President Leonard Woodcock as a possibility.

The South Dakota senator also said that one of the first two or three persons he would contact concerning the vice presidency was Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts.

He added this did not mean he was giving Kennedy first refusal on the job and strongly indicated he was accepting Kennedy's statement that he did not want to be on the ticket under any circumstance.

McGovern said he was giving "serious thought" to letting the convention freely select his running mate, but almost in the same breath explained he was considering reaching into the ranks of business or labor. It was then that Woodcock's name was mentioned.

Ted: 'No way' he'll run as vice president

HYANNIS, Mass. (UPI)—Sen. Edward Kennedy went sailing Sunday, insisting there is "no way" he would agree to become a vice presidential candidate at the Democratic National Convention this week.

"There is no way I will take the vice presidential nomination," Kennedy said at the Kennedy compound at Hyannisport. "I owe it to my family, I owe it to Joan, the children, my mother and sisters. There is no way I will take the nomination."

Egyptian army near revolt?

The respected weekly Al-Nahar Arab Report said Sunday the Egyptian armed forces are on the point of open rebellion and President Anwar Sadat's efforts to reassert his authority seems doomed to failure.

The weekly, which is published in Beirut and is reported to have reliable sources in the various Arab capitals, gave no specific reason for the unrest but said it "has reached the point of undeclared rebellion," particularly in the air force.

Unofficial reports from Cairo said the armed forces were becoming increasingly disenchanted with government policy after five years of a no-war, no-peace situation.

The semi-official Egyptian Middle East News Agency (MENA) reported the arrival in Cairo Sunday of Syrian President Hafez Assad from Moscow with a Soviet pledge to strengthen his armed forces.

France nods to NATO

WASHINGTON (UPI)—French Defense Minister Michel Debre arrives in Washington Monday with U.S. officials optimistically viewing his visit as a "very significant" step in renewing military ties between France and NATO.

In advance of his two-day stay, Washington officials forecast the prospect of some sort of reciprocal arms purchase agreement between the United States and France. This in turn, they said, could produce future cooperation with other western European governments.

Convention delegates look like they're going off cliff

By ARLEN J. LARGE
Dow Jones-Ottaway News
MIAMI BEACH — The folks gathering here for the Democratic convention seem to have something special in common, according to a party functionary who has been watching them. "They look like a bunch of people standing around before they jump off a cliff," he says.

The delegates step apprehensively off the edge with tonight's opening gavel. When the business is over next Thursday, the Democratic party may lie shattered in ruins for years to come. Or, less disastrously, it may build new inner strength to rebound after a loss this year. Conceivably, of course, it might instead be moving toward a miraculous victory over President Nixon in November.

"I'm looking forward to a happy week," Sen. George McGovern told an old folks' rally here over the weekend. But up the row of sugary-white resort hotels at McGovern's headquarters, his young campaign staffers reflect grim resentment at the alliance of other candidates and organized labor that could ruin their "happy week" even if the South Dakotan is nominated.

Waiting for move
"Many of us have waited for months to see how they would try to take the nomination away from us, and now it's happening," one bitter young McGovern worker says. "Even if we win, it takes the edge off. I just hope that some of these people come to their senses and realize they're on the verge of wrecking the party."

To his determined enemies, of course, it is the "radical" Sen. McGovern who is threatening to wreck the party with his divisive positions on welfare, defense, spending and amnesty for draft dodgers. "His stands have been so far-out, and that's why he's in trouble, that's why he's hit this stone wall," says Sen. Henry Jackson of Washington, who still hopes something will turn up to bring the nomination his way.

"McGovern isn't talking about creating new wealth, he's talking about redistributing it," complains Sen. Vance Hartke of Indiana, who hopes Hubert Humphrey wins the nomination after the second ballot. "That scares even the middle-income people, who just don't want to level everybody down to living in a $6,000 trailer."

Douglas Auerand is a 30-year-old Illinois delegate still pledged to Sen. Edmund Muskie, who is angling to become the front-runner once again after three ballots or so. Like many others here, Auerand fears a downward tug of the McGovern coattails on the party's local candidates. "If we top the ticket with McGovern, it would be disastrous," he says.

Have reservations
Muskie delegate Severin Beliveau, Maine's Democratic state chairman, concurs from his vantage point as chairman of an association of all the other state chairmen: "Many of them have reservations about McGovern's impact on local, country, legislative and congressional races."

All this plus the active hostility of George Meany's AFL-CIO has halted the McGovern momentum built up by last month's primary triumphs in California and New York. McGovern has had little good news since, and in adversity he has said things about possibly bolting the party that have given his foes fresh ammunition.

Although the senator's own threats about a third-party revolt have been cautious, his most fervent followers don't appear in any mood to tolerate any other nominee; they even rule out Sen. Ted Kennedy. One McGovern staffer fumes: "If they perform this rape, they aren't going to be able to come back to us and say, 'Here's Kennedy — you'll love him.' Our people won't buy it. They'll walk out."

Last week Sen. McGovern hoped that some of the anger on both sides would be calmed by a U.S. Court of Appeals giving him back 151 of the original 271 delegates he won in the California primary; the party Credentials Committee, dominated by an anti-McGovern coalition, had endangered his nomination by distributing these 151 delegates among the other candidates. But on Friday evening the U.S. Supreme Court ruled 6 to 3, that the judiciary shouldn't mix in political-party scraps, and that the convention delegates could come to McGovern's rescue if they decided he had been robbed.

Little success
Last night efforts were being made to work out credentials compromises, but there wasn't any sign of success.

So the big rescue scene will be played on the convention floor tonight, involving not only McGovern's 151 ousted Californians but also 59 exiled Illinoisians controlled by Chicago's Mayor Richard Daley. The televised drama continues Tuesday night on party platform disputes in which Alabama Gov. George Wallace has a suspenseful role, and the presidential nomination itself is to be settled Wednesday night.

If McGovern does win the party nomination he will have a stupendous job of convincing other Democrats that he won't carry them all out of office in November. One union source, pressed for specific examples of the McGovern threat, warns of the loss of four house seats in Michigan and two in Connecticut.

Anticipating McGovern's nomination, Democrats in the Tennessee legislature have established their own separate reelection campaign staff to shield them from national-party fallout. Besides McGovern's controversial positions on issues, other Democrats worry about "kidnash" — or resentment against his long-haired and sometimes scruffy young supporters.

To McGovern, the claimers all overlook what he considers a popular demand for political change that carried him this far. As for his youth-based organization,

McGovern Sunday called it the "broadest and strongest" ever seen. Speaking on NBC's "Meet The Press," he pointedly added: "That organization is going to be at the service of every Democrat running this year from the courthouse to the White House."

Some Democrats here who have little hope of capturing the White House this year nevertheless think that the party's efforts to get a broader cross section of convention delegates builds strength for the future. Almost 90 per cent of the delegates here are attending their first convention, including those both for and against McGovern.

Robert Allen, a 32-year-old uncommitted delegate from Arizona, thinks it only natural that things get a little brisk. "The first-time-type delegates on both sides are taking up their roles with enthusiasm, and it becomes emotional," he says. "It's like two lawyers going into a courtroom for the first time."

Blasts Hanoi stand

HHH raps McGovern

MIAMI BEACH (UPI)—Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey sharply criticized Sen. George S. McGovern Sunday for saying he would be willing to go to Hanoi and "beg" for the release of U.S. prisoners of war. "I wouldn't beg here, in Hanoi or anywhere," said Humphrey.

"I do not believe the word beg represents sound morality," Humphrey said. "I think it's unfortunate that Sen. McGovern used that term. There is a difference between tough negotiations and begging. I'm not a beggar."

The Minnesota senator was one of five presidential candidates interviewed on a special two-hour Meet the Press program on NBC on the eve of the opening of the convention.

While denouncing McGovern for his willingness to "beg," Humphrey conceded that he had softened his position on peace negotiations with the North Vietnamese. "Times have changed, the attitude of the people has changed, the attitude of the President has changed," he explained.

Humphrey defended his challenge of the California winner-take-all primary rule, which gave McGovern all 271 delegate votes, although he collected only 44 per cent of the vote.

That meant, said Humphrey, that 56 per cent of California's primary voters would be "disenfranchised" under the winner-take-all rule. The party's Credentials Committee has upset the winner-take-all rule and apportioned the delegates on popular vote and the full convention must settle the dispute tonight.

Slate of McGovern, Woodcock?

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — Frontrunner George S. McGovern, convinced he will win the Democratic presidential nomination, said Sunday he was considering reaching outside politics for a running mate. He specifically mentioned United Auto Workers President Leonard Woodcock as a possibility.

The South Dakota senator also said that one of the first two or three persons he would contact concerning the vice presidency was Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts.

He added this did not mean he was giving Kennedy first refusal on the job and strongly indicated he was accepting Kennedy's statement that he did not want to be on the ticket under any circumstance.

McGovern said he was giving "serious thought" to letting the convention freely select his running mate, but almost in the same breath explained he was considering reaching into the ranks of business or labor. It was then that Woodcock's name was mentioned.

HYANNIS, Mass. (UPI)—Sen. Edward Kennedy went sailing Sunday, insisting there is "no way" he would agree to become a vice presidential candidate at the Democratic National Convention this week. "There is no way I will take the vice presidential nomination," Kennedy said at the Kennedy compound at Hyannisport. "I owe it to my family. I owe it to Joan, the children, my mother and sisters. There is no way I will take the nomination."

Kennedy, who attended mass at Hyannis with members of the family Sunday morning, told the Boston Globe he has made an "absolute and final" rejection of any draft for the second place on the ticket. "I have made this very clear to Sen. McGovern," the Massachusetts senator said.

Still, the speculation continued that Kennedy would have an important role in the 1972 campaign, regardless of whether he relented and did accept a place on the ticket in a genuine draft.

With the senator and his family were his mother, Mrs. Rose Kennedy, his sister, Eunice, and Mrs. Ethel Kennedy, among other members of Massachusetts' most distinguished political family.

The church where the Kennedys attend mass in Hyannis has poignant memories, because of the late Joseph Kennedy Jr., who is remembered in a plaque in the small, white wooden framed church.

Old car buffs hold meet

By BRUCE POSTEN
Pocono Record Reporter
BUSHKILL. — Dr. Erle Heath of Pittsburgh, owner of a 1930 Duesenberg auto, was the high point winner Saturday at the annual Classic Car Club of America competition held at Tamiment Resort and Country Club.

Heath's Duesenberg, a black boat-tailed speedster with aluminum body by Murphy, scored 99½ points out of a possible 100 points in competition with 60 other "classics". He was awarded a Classic Club Trophy and a wooden plaque inscribed with the name, make, and year of his car.

Earning second place honors with 98 points was a 1939 Packard Touring Cabriolet owned by George Tipl of Short Hills, New Jersey.

Thomas R. Kerr, one of 20 judges evaluating the autos, explained there were 14 separate classes of competition with different winners in each group.

"For instance, a 1934 Bentley, owned by George Morse of Upper Montclair, N.J., was voted the most popular car because of desirability of ownership among participants," he said.

Kerr also cited Harry Van Iderstine as an award winner for traveling the longest distance to enter the competition. Van Iderstine, a resident of Kingswood, West Virginia, earned 95.7 points after driving his 1930 Packard Speedster Sedan to the Poconos.

Vintage cars from 1925 to 1942 were displayed and painstakingly evaluated for authenticity, appearance, and mechanical excellence. The smallest nick or crack in paint did not miss the careful scrutiny of each judge as points were tabulated to determine the winner.

Morton Bullock, national secretary of the Classic Club, explained six Classic Club competitions were being held simultaneously throughout the country with winners named in each contest.

"The competition being held at Tamiment is for club members in the eastern United States with cars from New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and West Virginia," he said.

He added the other five competitions were being held at San Antonio, Texas; Monterey, Calif.; Oklahoma City, Oklahoma; Indianapolis Speedway, Indianapolis; and Greenfield Village at the Henry Ford Museum in Dearborn, Michigan.

Bullock praised the old classics for their perfection and handmade workmanship even though they lacked the advanced engineering of modern automobiles.

"Many of these cars were made before automotive mass production was introduced in the 1930's, so naturally they are a higher quality, which sets them apart from other cars," he said.

Bullock pointed to a tan 1932 Auburn with orange wheelspokes and huge whitewall tires. "That car would have cost $2,000 when it was built in 1932, but today it is worth considerably more," he said.

He would not speculate on the exact price of any of the classics, but generally remarked "some of these cars are priceless antiques."

Avid car fans could easily detect the different makes represented at the contest by shining silver and gold radiator ornaments attached to the top of each carhood.

Officials remain firm on Tocks opposition

BELVIDERE, N.J. — The destruction left in the wake of last week's Hurricane Agnes did not deter the Warren County (N.J.) Freeholders from their anti-Tocks Island Dam stand.

The determination of the freeholders was made quite clear this week after the board read a letter from U.S. Rep. Frank Thompson, Jr., D-N.J., a proponent of the dam.

The letter read in part, that if the dam is not constructed, counties and municipalities on the Delaware River will be in jeopardy of the kind of "scenes of death and destruction which Hurricane Agnes quite recently visited upon the Susquehanna River Basin."

The Senator continued, "But for a quirk of nature, our citizens would be digging themselves out from mud and debris."

Freeholders Herman A. Shotwell and Benjamin Bosco, who voted for a resolution against the dam, expressed their feeling that the most effective place for flood control is on the tributaries of the Delaware River rather than on the river itself.

Bosco pointed out that at least seven flood control dams have already been constructed on the river's tributaries in Pennsylvania.

He further expressed the opinion that the flood control measures might have been a factor in the Delaware River Basin's escape from damage during the storm.

Thompson also wrote letters urging support of the Tocks Island Dam to New Jersey Governor William T. Cahill and President Nixon.

In view of the governor's recent publicized reservations about the project, Thompson said withdrawal of New Jersey's support would provide a serious, if not fatal, blow to the project.

In the letter to the President, the Senator expressed his concern over the delay of construction of the dam.

He told the President it is essential that the federal Council on Environmental Quality move "as expeditiously as possible" in its review of the project's environmental impact statement so the project can proceed.

Thompson said there should be no further delay on the project unless there are clear and compelling reasons.

Driver hurt in accident
Palmerton Hospital building Gilbert unit

MILFORD — A 20-year-old New York motorist is in satisfactory condition at St. Francis Hospital in Port Jervis, N.Y. after his car rolled over on Route 6 near Milford late Thursday night.

Robert Infurna, of Brooklyn, N.Y., was taken to the hospital by the Milford Fire Department ambulance following the one-car mishap.

A Pennsylvania State Police spokesman from the Milford barracks said Infurna apparently failed to properly negotiate a left curve in the highway and ran off the left berm. The car then struck an embankment and rolled onto its roof.

ALLENTOWN — The Palmerton Hospital has begun construction of a medical unit on Route 209 in Gilbert, Monroe County.

David L. Gamble, president of the board of trustees, announced that the unit will serve a growing area with a population of 12,000.

He said that the 12 by 60-foot modular building is being built adjacent to the Gilbert Branch of the First National Bank of Palmerton. The half-acre tract has been provided through the courtesy of the bank.

Gamble stated that the unit will include a waiting room, two examining rooms, doctor's office and consultation room. Members of the hospital's medical staff will be on duty.

The hospital spokesman noted that the new facility will be an extension of the hospital's Emergency Department on weekends and holidays. During the week it will serve as an office for general practitioners.

"We are putting a medical unit in Gilbert," Gamble said, "in response to a need for emergency and other medical care expressed by the citizens of the area."

He noted that Gilbert is midway between Palmerton Hospital and the General Hospital of Monroe County in Stroudsburg.

Drop-out Muskie poised for all-out convention assault

By DONAL R. LARRABEE
Ottaway New Service
Washington Bureau

MIAMI BEACH — Remember January's Democratic front-runner, Edmund S. Muskie? The most prominent drop-out of the primary campaign, the Maine Senator may still be a factor in this convention.

The benign Muskie presidential campaign is poised like a space rocket here in Florida waiting for ignition. The Senator himself is keeping his powder dry and his options open but his lieutenants have arranged a full-scale, fully-staffed operation at the Americana Hotel and at facilities adjacent to Convention Hall.

"Senator Muskie will carry a more active candidacy into Miami Beach than has been publicly visible," Deputy Convention Manager Thomas D. Finney said. "We may be proved wrong but we're gearing up to win the whole thing."

Occupying two floors of the spacious Americana and two trailers at the Hall, Muskie will have a basic headquarters staff of about 60 persons plus scores of youthful volunteers. He will have as many as 100 aides working on delegate contacts.

Sen. Harold Hughes of Iowa, Muskie's Convention manager, plans to operate primarily out of the "boiler room" political offices in the trailers with the assistance of Finney, a law-partner of former Defense Secretary Clark Clifford.

Other key figures on the Muskie team here are Berl Bernhard, the campaign director; Maine's National Committeeman and Muskie confidante, George Mitchell; the floor manager, Sherwin Markman, a Johnson Administration White House assistant; and press secretary Richard Stewart.

Markman will have assistants with responsibility for two or three states, apiece. The master plan calls for having one contact man for every 20 delegates on the floor.

The Muskie strategists will have access to a dozen direct lines from the floor to the trailers and the Senator's working suite on the fourth floor of his headquarters hotel — some 50 blocks from the Hall.

All in all, it will be a sizeable endeavor, if slightly reduced from the encourage everyone had in mind six months ago when Muskie was leading in all the polls and the calculations of the mass media.

While Muskie and his people won't be using all of the 500 rooms that were set aside for them last winter at the Americana, there will be some 300 Muskie staffers, volunteers, friends and contributors occupying space in the hotel. Scores of young workers are busily to Florida on their own hook to help out.

Unquestionably, there has been a lift to the Muskie campaign since last week's decision by the Democratic Credentials Committee to strip Sen. George McGovern of his full California delegation and McGovern's testy reactions to the coalition efforts to stop him. Muskie himself has remained clear of any involvement in what might appear to be a "Stop McGovern" movement but his delegates have remained largely loyal.

"The McGovern momentum has been slowed if not stopped by the action of the credentials committee," Finney said. "If the nomination is not decided on the first ballot, then it will go to two or three with Muskie gaining each time. We're now convinced that this thing can be done."

Muskie strategists say there has been a great "hardening of attitudes" among the delegates in the past week, with many persons who were genuinely uncommitted, now settled on a candidate. Muskie has picked up 90 firm pledges of support in the past two or three weeks, according to staff estimates, although he still runs behind McGovern, Hubert Humphrey and George Wallace in numbers of committed delegates.

Muskie's headquarters at the Americana originally was to have occupied the top floors. That was when he was living in the rarified atmosphere of the top man. Now, he is ensconced nearer the Mezzanine floor, with no place to go, according to aides, but up.

Poconos' first rock fest last?

The Poconos' first rock festival worthy of the name is history and the largest crowd ever to gather in the area is gone — almost, anyway.

Saturday was a day for firsts and largest. The most inconvenient of all was the largest traffic jam in history, with the wall-to-wall humanity inside the Pocono International Raceway being matched by roadside-to-roadside cars all along Rte. 115, backed up along Interstate 80 right into New Jersey and cars parked everywhere there was room for one, no matter where.

The results? One young man dead in a traffic accident while heading for the concert. Two young people seriously injured with broken backs. One young man stabbed and seriously injured in an argument somewhere in the sea of rock-stunned humanity. Too many minor injuries to count. And the freest flow of drugs we hope this area will ever see.

It was obvious that no one really was ready for the massive throng of rock lovers. Some estimates were as high as 200,000. Others were a more conservative 150,000. There really was no way of knowing.

The promised ample parking never materialized, mostly because the massive numbers prevented what security forces were available from seeing that concert-goers made the best use of parking lots. Cars were strewn helter-skelter without rhyme or reason, one car taking the space of two and sometimes three.

The most alarming thing about the unfortunate traffic situation was that emergency vehicles couldn't move any more than private vehicles. The Tunkhannock Fire Co. station was completely blocked by parked cars. Had there been a fire in the area, there was no way fire crews could have gotten to it.

The numbers of injured had to be evacuated to the General Hospital of Monroe County (which did an excellent job, by the way; Saturday was easily the busiest day its emergency room has ever had) by helicopter shuttle, the big choppers flying in and out every 10 minutes.

State Police were taken by surprise by the turnout. Reinforcements had to be brought in. The sewage brigade dissolved in the mass and toilet facilities were so badly overtaxed they were all but useless.

Which brings up a point. The problems enumerated were the same problems which caused raceway officials to call off the Schaefer 500 last week. Why wasn't the rock concert called off as well? Money is one answer that comes readily to mind: lots of it for the concert, but a loss for the race.

And now residents are left with a good part of the cleanup. While the raceway supposedly will be cleaned by the concert promoters, no one is going to do anything about the car-seared lawns and littered woodlands around the track. No one is going to do anything for the youngsters who were hurt, some by their own actions, true, but others through lack of foresight on the part of concert planners and lack of security forces at the raceway.

The State Police did a masterful job in the face of virtually insurmountable obstacles. But they were just a few men, where hundreds were needed. The concert's planners should have provided them; they didn't.

While we have nothing against young people enjoying themselves, this sort of happening is nonsense. We sincerely hope that this may not only have been the first rock festival of this magnitude in the Poconos, but also the last. Smaller events held more often throughout the summer would make a lot more sense.

We hope a lesson has been learned from this. Another "Woodstock Nation" we do not need. "Woodstock mini-states" are a lot better and easier to handle. And easier on those left behind when the whirlwind of rock has gone.

The Pennsylvania Story

Modular home regulations

MIAMI — AFL-CIO chief George Meany, the angry man behind the Stop McGovern drive, has made kindling of every olive branch the McGovern forces have offered him.

The durable old despot has been cordial enough to a McGovern speech at the AFL-CIO convention.

Privately, however, the old curmudgeon breathes fire at the mention of McGovern's name, calls him "the candidate of amnesty, acid and appeasement" and threatens to withhold AFL-CIO support if he's nominated.

What's more, Meany apparently won't be mollified. He's accustomed to settling Democratic presidential politics in the smoke-filled backrooms, with his own stogie predominant. And he's too old and stubborn to let party reforms change the political habits of a lifetime.

Some intimates say he turned sour on McGovern during the Senate battle over Section 14(b) of the Taft-Hartley Act in 1966. The AFL-CIO sought to repeal this section, which permits states to adopt right-to-work laws that weaken labor unions.

The move was defeated by a filibuster, which pro-labor senators tried in vain to shut off. On the first roll call, McGovern voted to stop the filibuster.

McGovern mix-up

This was unpopular in McGovern's native South Dakota, which has a right-to-work law. He, therefore, notified two top labor lobbyists — the AFL-CIO's Andy Biemiller and the Retail Clerks' Charles Lipsen — that he would like to change his vote. He asked for their agreement, promising he would stick with them if they really needed his vote.

Biemiller agreed to give McGovern a "pass," that is, to release him from his labor commitment unless his vote should be needed in the clutch.

On the next roll call, McGovern's vote wasn't decisive, so he switched in favor of the filibuster. He was the only one who changed his vote.

Meany was so angry that the lobbyists didn't dare tell him they had okayed McGovern's reversal. The old labor lord was attending a shindig at Miami's Americana Hotel when he learned they had lost a vote on the second roll call.

Witnesses recall that he turned on Lipsen, who had flown to Miami for the occasion.

"Who was the double-crosser?" growled Meany.

"Let me explain," Lipsen began.

Meany cut him off. "I don't want any explanations," he thundered. "Just tell me who was the double-crosser."

Lipsen kept trying to explain the circumstances but finally was browbeaten into simply divulging McGovern's name. That was all Meany wanted to hear.

Rather than embarrass the two subordinates, McGovern never tried to square himself with Meany. Only reluctantly would McGovern now confirm the incident to us six years afterward. Lipsen refused to comment, saying only that Meany was "a great man." And Biemiller couldn't be reached.

Meeting with Meany

At the start of his presidential campaign last year, McGovern tried to make peace with Meany. McGovern carefully avoided compromising the two labor lobbyists and, therefore, didn't mention that he had cleared his controversial vote in advance. All he said to Meany was: "I was wrong on the 14(b) matter. I struck out. I made a mistake."

To McGovern's surprise, Meany shrugged it off. "What upset me more than that," he grunted, "was your criticism of me on the Russian wheat deal."

As Food for Peace director during the Kennedy administration, McGovern had accused Meany of blocking wheat shipments to Russia. The AFL-CIO chief said it wasn't true.

McGovern said his information had come from the highest authority. "But if I was wrong," he said, "I apologize."

What really bothers Meany, say some intimates, is McGovern's anti-war record. But whatever it is, the 77-year-old labor leader intends to summon all his fading powers to block McGovern's nomination.

Democratic doings

Running mates — Party regulars are pushing Wilbur Mills for the vice presidential nomination. As House Ways and Means chairman, he has clout with the big corporations. And the Democrats are so broke, they need a candidate with access to some corporate cash. Senator George McGovern, however, doesn't want any of the party's big guns as his running mate. He has talked to subordinates even about picking a non-politician, perhaps a college president or a consumer advocate like Ralph Nader, for the No. 2 spot. Hubert Humphrey told us that, if he should be nominated, he'd try to persuade McGovern to accept the vice presidential nomination.

McGovern's Acceptance — George McGovern has been quietly collecting ideas from his staff for an acceptance speech in case he should win the Democratic presidential nomination. He'll write the final draft himself, because he's uncomfortable with someone else's phrases. Throughout the campaign, he'll avoid formal speeches as much as possible. He peters the informality of a press conference.

By JACK ANDERSON

HARRISBURG — The past few years have seen the mobile and modular home industries throughout the country take root and grow rapidly, becoming more and more a part of everyday living — a point somewhat poignantly illustrated in these aftermath days of rampaging Hurricane Agnes.

For example, a complete new mobile home village has sprung up on the State Farm Show parking lot in uptown Harrisburg to help house flood-displaced Capital City residents.

Just the other day the Commonwealth signed a contract with the Army Corps of Engineers for the development of mobile home sites as needed throughout the state to serve as temporary housing for homeless flood victims.

Hard-hit

In the critically hard-hit Wilkes-Barre area more than 1,200 acres have been located to accommodate mobile homes.

This is the temporary, expedient side of the picture painted in time of emergency or crisis — but there is also the "long run" or "permanent" side to mobile homes and modular housing.

With the increase in these mobile communities around the Commonwealth came a variety of local rules and regulations attempting to provide quality and safety standards for this type of housing — housing which is crucially needed for low and moderate income families.

These sometimes widely varying laws have resulted in Governor Shapp's signing of two Administration initiated bills which will not only make these housing units better places to live but will provide more of them.

This, in turn, should help stimulate Pennsylvania's industrial housing industries.

From the quality and safety viewpoint, all mobile homes sold in Pennsylvania will have to display a seal which will indicate that they have been inspected and meet the new, uniform standards contained in the Uniform Standards Code for Mobile Homes.

Merry-go-round

Tale of two Georges

Inspection of these units will be administered by the Pennsylvania Department of Community Affairs.

In-plant and on-site inspections will be carried out in cooperation with local governments. Cooperation also is expected from other states for inspection of out-of-state plants.

Key items

Safety and adequacy are the key items provided for in these bills. According to the Governor, these new regulations will affect the quality of living but not the consumer's pocketbook.

This he insists is part of his "1972 — The Year of the Consumer" campaign, designed to help improve the living standards of all Pennsylvanians.

The higher quality of the homes will produce a greater market and will encourage the manufacturers to expand and make production more efficient.

According to the Governor, this will make Pennsylvania an integral part of a potential multi-billion dollar east coast industrial housing industry and hopefully create a great many jobs for citizens of the Commonwealth.

The Governor has introduced related legislation which would amend the Pennsylvania Housing Agency Act to allow the Agency to directly finance home rental and ownership for low and moderate income families, to further stem the housing crisis in the state.

It's all regarded as at least part of the answer to seriously helping meet the crucial need for low cost quality housing for Pennsylvania's home buyers.

Drummond Roundup

Unfairness of primaries

(EDITOR'S NOTE: During the political conventions, Roscoe Drummond will write a regular Sunday column in place of his usual Sunday Washington Focus format consisting of news shorts.)

MIAMI BEACH — In the breathless moment between the end of the marathon series of primaries and the beginning of a frenzied national convention, two things can fairly be said:

1 — Sen. George McGovern has earned the Democratic presidential nomination — if anybody has.

2 — Presidential candidates ought never again to be subjected to this hideous, unfair, undemocratic process for deciding who shall be nominated.

If openly elected national conventions are not to be trusted to make the choice, then the exhausting, demeaning, profligate system of end-on-end primaries must be radically reformed.

The fact that these primaries did not yield anything approaching a majority verdict of the Democratic Party does not make McGovern's moral claim any less valid.

System open

He used the only system open to him. He used it honestly and effectively. He won most of the delegates in contest. Fifteen other candidates tried; seven fell by the wayside. No other contender came near to his delegate total.

He is now near enough to an early-ballot nomination so that if it is taken away from him by a coalition of second-choices, McGovern's supporters and not a few others will see it as a wheeler-dealer brokering of the nomination which will tear the party apart.

If George Wallace supporters came that near and had it taken away from them, they would feel the same. So would Humphrey and Muskie supporters.

Just because McGovern benefited by an unrepresentative, outmoded set of primaries does not set aside his legitimacy. He played by the past rules and the rules ought not be changed in the middle of the game.

Need to be changed

But they do need to be changed for everybody before we face it all over again. The system needs to be overhauled for these reasons:

It creates a distorted result. Then winner of the highest popular vote got the fewest delegates. With the largest popular vote, Humphrey got 300 delegates and McGovern, with fewer popular votes, got about 1,200 delegates. There's something wrong somewhere if the purpose is to enable voters to decide whom they want their party to nominate.

The present primary system produces winners on the basis of a minute percentage of voters. The primaries are massively neglected by voters because rarely does it appear that a single primary is crucial. This isn't "participation politics"; it is nonparticipation politics.

There is a further weakness. A national decision, which is what a party's presidential nomination is, rests on the whim of each state. Thus primaries are to day held in a minority of states and bring to bear on the end result a small minority of voters.

Not good enough

This just isn't good enough.

Either the whole nation should have the opportunity to vote in one national primary or at most a series of three or four regional primaries — or there shouldn't be any primaries. Anything else is unrepresentative, undemocratic and misleading.

There are pitfalls to such a national primary if the decision is binding. Things could go awry and in a moment of aberration an oddball could win. I have always thought we ought to try out the national primary tentatively until we find out how well it works. It could be advisory with the conventions making the final choice.

But save us from another such 23-mile cross-country primary race like this year.

At the start of his presidential campaign last year, McGovern tried to make peace with Meany. McGovern carefully avoided compromising the two labor lobbyists and, therefore, didn't mention that he had cleared his controversial vote in advance. All he said to Meany was: "I was wrong on the 14(b) matter. I struck out. I made a mistake."

To McGovern's surprise, Meany shrugged it off. "What upset me more than that," he grunted, "was your criticism of me on the Russian wheat deal."

As Food for Peace director during the Kennedy administration, McGovern had accused Meany of blocking wheat shipments to Russia. The AFL-CIO chief said it wasn't true.

McGovern said his information had come from the highest authority. "But if I was wrong," he said, "I apologize."

What really bothers Meany, say some intimates, is McGovern's anti-war record. But whatever it is, the 77-year-old labor leader intends to summon all his fading powers to block McGovern's nomination.

Democratic doings

Running mates — Party regulars are pushing Wilbur Mills for the vice presidential nomination. As House Ways and Means chairman, he has clout with the big corporations. And the Democrats are so broke, they need a candidate with access to some corporate cash. Senator George McGovern, however, doesn't want any of the party's big guns as his running mate. He has talked to subordinates even about picking a non-politician, perhaps a college president or a consumer advocate like Ralph Nader, for the No. 2 spot. Hubert Humphrey told us that, if he should be nominated, he'd try to persuade McGovern to accept the vice presidential nomination.

McGovern's Acceptance — George McGovern has been quietly collecting ideas from his staff for an acceptance speech in case he should win the Democratic presidential nomination. He'll write the final draft himself, because he's uncomfortable with someone else's phrases. Throughout the campaign, he'll avoid formal speeches as much as possible. He peters the informality of a press conference.

By JACK ANDERSON

HARRISBURG — The past few years have seen the mobile and modular home industries throughout the country take root and grow rapidly, becoming more and more a part of everyday living — a point somewhat poignantly illustrated in these aftermath days of rampaging Hurricane Agnes!

For example, a complete new mobile home village has sprung up on the State Farm Show parking lot in uptown Harrisburg to help house flood-displaced Capital City residents.

Just the other day the Commonwealth signed a contract with the Army Corps of Engineers for the development of mobile home sites as needed throughout the state to serve as temporary housing for homeless flood victims.

Hard-hit

In the critically hard-hit Wilkes-Barre area more than 1,200 acres have been located to accommodate mobile homes.

This is the temporary, expedient side of the picture painted in time of emergency or crisis — but there is also the "long run" or "permanent" side to mobile homes and modular housing.

With the increase in these mobile communities around the Commonwealth came a variety of local rules and regulations attempting to provide quality and safety standards for this type of housing — housing which is crucially needed for low and moderate income families.

These sometimes widely varying laws have resulted in Governor Shapp's signing of two Administration initiated bills which will not only make these housing units better places to live but will provide more of them.

This, in turn, should help stimulate Pennsylvania's industrial housing industries.

From the quality and safety viewpoint, all mobile homes sold in Pennsylvania will have to display a seal which will indicate that they have been inspected and meet the new, uniform standards contained in the Uniform Standards Code for Mobile Homes.

Merry-go-round

Tale of two Georges

Inspection of these units will be administered by the Pennsylvania Department of Community Affairs.

In-plant and on-site inspections will be carried out in cooperation with local governments. Cooperation also is expected from other states for inspection of out-of-state plants.

Key items

Safety and adequacy are the key items provided for in these bills. According to the Governor, these new regulations will affect the quality of living but not the consumer's pocketbook.

This he insists is part of his "1972 — The Year of the Consumer" campaign, designed to help improve the living standards of all Pennsylvanians.

The higher quality of the homes will produce a greater market and will encourage the manufacturers to expand and make production more efficient.

According to the Governor, this will make Pennsylvania an integral part of a potential multi-billion dollar east coast industrial housing industry and hopefully create a great many jobs for citizens of the Commonwealth.

The Governor has introduced related legislation which would amend the Pennsylvania Housing Agency Act to allow the Agency to directly finance home rental and ownership for low and moderate income families, to further stem the housing crisis in the state.

It's all regarded as at least part of the answer to seriously helping meet the crucial need for low cost quality housing for Pennsylvania's home buyers.

Drummond Roundup

Unfairness of primaries

(EDITOR'S NOTE: During the political conventions, Roscoe Drummond will write a regular Sunday column in place of his usual Sunday Washington Focus format consisting of news shorts.)

MIAMI BEACH — In the breathless moment between the end of the marathon series of primaries and the beginning of a frenzied national convention, two things can fairly be said:

1 — Sen. George McGovern has earned the Democratic presidential nomination — if anybody has.

2 — Presidential candidates ought never again to be subjected to this hideous, unfair, undemocratic process for deciding who shall be nominated.

If openly elected national conventions are not to be trusted to make the choice, then the exhausting, demeaning, profligate system of end-on-end primaries must be radically reformed.

The fact that these primaries did not yield anything approaching a majority verdict of the Democratic Party does not make McGovern's moral claim any less valid.

System open

He used the only system open to him. He used it honestly and effectively. He won most of the delegates in contest. Fifteen other candidates tried; seven fell by the wayside. No other contender came near to his delegate total.

He is now near enough to an early-ballot nomination so that if it is taken away from him by a coalition of second-choices, McGovern's supporters and not a few others will see it as a wheeler-dealer brokering of the nomination which will tear the party apart.

If George Wallace supporters came that near and had it taken away from them, they would feel the same. So would Humphrey and Muskie supporters.

Just because McGovern benefited by an unrepresentative, outmoded set of primaries does not set aside his legitimacy. He played by the past rules and the rules ought not be changed in the middle of the game.

Need to be changed

But they do need to be changed for everybody before we face it all over again. The system needs to be overhauled for these reasons:

It creates a distorted result. Then winner of the highest popular vote got the fewest delegates. With the largest popular vote, Humphrey got 300 delegates and McGovern, with fewer popular votes, got about 1,200 delegates. There's something wrong somewhere if the purpose is to enable voters to decide whom they want their party to nominate.

The present primary system produces winners on the basis of a minute percentage of voters. The primaries are massively neglected by voters because rarely does it appear that a single primary is crucial. This isn't "participation politics"; it is nonparticipation politics.

There is a further weakness. A national decision, which is what a party's presidential nomination is, rests on the whim of each state. Thus primaries are to day held in a minority of states and bring to bear on the end result a small minority of voters.

Not good enough

This just isn't good enough. Either the whole nation should have the opportunity to vote in one national primary or at most a series of three or four regional primaries — or there shouldn't be any primaries. Anything else is unrepresentative, undemocratic and misleading.

There are pitfalls to such a national primary if the decision is binding. Things could go awry and in a moment of aberration an oddball could win. I have always thought we ought to try out the national primary tentatively until we find out how well it works. It could be advisory with the conventions making the final choice.

But save us from another such 23-mile cross-country primary race like this year.

Hopes to bring delegation along

Shapp plans McGovern leap

By TIM METZ
Miami News Service
MIAMI BEACH — Indications are growing that Pennsylvania Gov. Milton Shapp is poised to leap aboard Sen. George McGovern's presidential bandwagon and that he'll try to take as many of the state's 39 Muskie, 75 Humphrey and 12 uncommitted delegates with him as he can.

While the governor remained in Harrisburg tending to flood aftermath problems that he said would prevent him from attending the Democratic convention, several of his cabinet ministers and key aides here over the weekend began implementing a switch to McGovern.

According to information from well-placed Shapp Administration sources, the switch to McGovern will be attempted through a two-stage plan.

The first phase, which began over the weekend, involves efforts to help the South Dakota senator win his crucial floor fight over seating of the 151 McGovern California delegates stripped from him by the Democratic convention's credentials committee in Washington more than a week ago.

Last week's action on lawsuits arising from the credentials committee meeting involved all three levels of federal courts, with the Supreme Court's action in effect throwing the issue before the full Democratic convention for resolution.

2-part strategy
Shapp's strategy involves aiding McGovern's California delegation on two levels. Sunday, the governor issued a strong statement from Harrisburg supporting the McGovern position that he should retain all 271 delegates he won in that state's winner-take-all primary. (Shapp, however, carefully included a reference to his remaining "100 per cent" behind the candidacy of Maine Sen. Edmund S. Muskie.)

In addition to Shapp's statement, his backers were hard at work through the weekend lining up Pennsylvania delegate support to reverse the credentials committee's ruling openly — laying the groundwork for a Pennsylvania delegation switch to McGovern for president, which is the second stage of the governor's plan.

One high administration official told the Ottawa News Service that Shapp forces are confident of swinging or converting about half the state's 39 Muskie delegates to McGovern, especially in the coal regions (in the central to northeastern part of the state). There are some 18 Muskie delegates from the region the official mentioned. "And we feel a good many Humphrey delegates from all over the state would consider backing McGovern as well."

So far, none of Shapp's cadre is openly advocating switches to McGovern in their corridor chats and informal caucuses with delegates housed at the Barcelona Hotel. "And you can be relatively sure there won't be any such urgings that would apply on the first ballot — even if the candidates release their delegates before then," said the administration official.

More effective
The Shapp forces believe they can get more delegates to switch to McGovern with their two-stage strategy than by launching a full-blown McGovern movement in one stroke.

The rationale: Once delegates are sold on giving McGovern the votes he won in the California primary, they've already moved a step closer to supporting him. And if the Pennsylvania votes prove crucial in putting McGovern over the top in that floor fight — which the numbers clearly suggest they could — then the Pennsylvania delegation stands to gain tremendous leverage in return for supporting McGovern in the presidential balloting later in the week.

Shapp's ultimate dream, confided one insider, is to have the Pennsylvania delegation switch become the single leading factor in a McGovern nomination. "It has great appeal," he said. "The governor clearly climbed on the wrong horse at the wrong time by lining up behind Ed Muskie, and he's lost a lot of face both in and outside the state because of it."

"But, if events cooperate and somebody doesn't upstage him in the meantime, Shapp could come out of this looking like a shrewd political kingmaker who applied precisely the right amount of leverage at precisely the right time," he said.

"We see it as a kind of Phoenix thing — up from the ashes."

That's what Gov. Shapp hopes will happen, of course. But — in part because of bad feeling among some delegation members over Shapp's error in backing Muskie in the first place — his Miami strategy is far from assured.

In some preliminary "feeler" caucuses Saturday night some key delegation members were angered to perceive the beginning of a move to McGovern. In fact, insiders present at one such meeting said that powerful Philadelphia boss Peter Camiel stalked angrily out of the meeting after a heated exchange with state Democratic Chairman (and firm Shapp backer) Harvey Thiemann.

"I think that just about rules out any hope of getting Camiel's Philadelphia Muskie delegates to switch to McGovern," sighed one well-placed Shapp Administration operative. "He just can't ever buy McGovern — because a guy like (McGovern) is just too big a threat to an organization politician like Camiel," the Shapp man said.

Some Shapp Administration officials aren't nearly so impressed by the McGovern switch strategy as others. And some, like Secretary of the Commonwealth C. Delores Tucker, are already quietly opposing it.

Saturday night, Mrs. Tucker quietly made the rounds in the Barcelona urging knots of Muskie delegates to stand firm and expressing her opposition to a McGovern candidacy. "I haven't got anything against McGovern — or Humphrey either, for that matter," the stunningly attractive black official told one table of Muskie delegates at a Barcelona nightclub early Sunday morning. "It's just that neither of them can beat Richard Nixon. Muskie is the only candidate here who can."

Depending, of course, on how successful his cadre is in converting delegates to McGovern and what political advantage such switches may bring, Shapp is prepared to swoop into Miami Beach at mid-week to capitalize on the situation. "If things go the way some of us think they will, you'll probably see the governor here Wednesday," said one high Shapp official.

Mrs. Heino Fette
(Memory Studio)

Miss Gloria Vince bride of Heino Fette

MOUNT POCONO — The Lutheran Church of Our Savior, Mount Pocono was the setting on July 8 at noon for the wedding ceremony uniting Miss Gloria Vince to Heino Fette.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose J. Vince, Sterling Road, Mount Pocono. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Adolf Ranke, R.D., Tobyhanna.

Rev. Lawrence E. Kelm performed the double ring ceremony. The church altar was decorated with arrangements of white majestic daisies and yellow daisy pom-pom chrysanthemums.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of white chiffon with pleated and shirred bodice and Juliet sleeves. Venice lace and matching ribbon accented the empire waist, neckline and sleeves. A Camelot lace cap held her shoulder length bouffant veil of imported French illusion. She carried a colonial hand bouquet of yellow sweetheart roses with white daisies and baby breath.

Miss Mary Lynn Vince, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a similarly styled gown of buttercup yellow. Her headpiece consisted of a buttercup yellow lace and ribbon bow. She carried a hand bouquet of orange matadore sweetheart roses and yellow daisies.

Harold Miller of Mount Pocono was best man. Patt Vince, sister of the bride, was in charge of the guest book. She was presented a corsage of orange sweetheart roses.

The bride's mother wore a street-length dress of beige chiffon with brown accessories and wore a corsage of yellow and orange roses. The bridegroom's mother wore a pale blue knit street length dress with matching accessories and wore a corsage of pink and variegated red and white roses.

Immediately following the ceremony a buffet luncheon was held in the church social hall. The three-tier wedding cake was decorated with white and yellow roses in the wedding color scheme. The wedding table was decorated with a centerpiece of matadore sweetheart roses, yellow daisies and white snapdragons. Guests tables were decorated with floral arrangements of yellow daisies and white snapdragons.

The bride and groom are both graduates of Pocono Mountain High School. The bride is employed as a secretary by Pal-Car Construction, Pocono Lake.

Pocono Pines area has its own historian

POCONO PINES — The early history of the Pocono Pines region is included in the recently published book "Changing Times in the Poconos: 1882-1972" written by Emma LaBarre Miller Waygood, Smith College, 1914.

The book, illustrated with many old pictures, also tells of the beginnings of many resorts in the area.

It was in 1882, for instance, that 500 acres was named "Naomi Pines" by Thomas T. Miller of Easton. He chose "Naomi" from the Bible story of Ruth and Naomi, and "Pines" to protect them from being lumbered by the Stauffer, then called "King of the Poconos," the author records.

The name was changed by his son, Thomas T. Miller, to Pocono Pines in 1902.

The book also contains stories of lumbering in the area and ice cutting on the lakes, and the formation of Lake Naomi.

It records the history of the Pocono Pines Assembly in 1902 by Dr. Rufus Miller with the help of Stroudsburg and East Stroudsburg businessmen. In 1918, the property was taken over for recuperation and vocational training for World War II Veterans.

The property was purchased by the Lutheran Conference and Camp Assn. in 1926, and named Lutherland, later changed to Pocono Crest. The latest sale was in 1969 to a group from Wilkes-Barre with the mortgage held by a Philadelphia bank.

Lake Naomi on the other hand has been developed independently. The book brings its history up to date since its purchase in 1963 by Robert Steele of Mountain Lakes, N.J. who bought 2,600 acres. Mrs. Waygood has also told stories of the early Pocono Schools, the origin of Pocono Manor and Pocono Lake Preserve and how they have changed over the years, as well as of the camps, old hotels and shops, the churches and local organizations.

She brings the history up to date, including many old and new anecdotes of the area. The book may be purchased in many of the shops in and near Pocono Pines as well as at Wyckoff's book department in Stroudsburg.

Heimer-Knitter rites held in Stone Church

PEN ARGYL — Miss Joan Katherine Knitter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert D. Knitter of R.D. 1, Pen Argyl became the bride of James E. Heimer on July 8 at 4 p.m. in the Hope United Church of Christ, Wind Gap.

The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Laura Heimer and the late Charles Heimer of R.D. 1, Pen Argyl.

Rev. Forrest Miller performed the ceremony with Mrs. Olga Weidlich of Saylorsburg as organist and Robert Ealey of R.D. 1, Pen Argyl as soloist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attended by her sister, Miss Susan Knitter, as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Susan Nolf and Miss Christine Nolf of R.D. 1, Wind Gap and Miss Janet Johnson of R.D. 1, Pen Argyl. Miss Christine Ceraul, also of R.D. 1, Pen Argyl was junior bridesmaid and Miss Lisa Ceraul, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. Ceraul of R.D. 1, Pen Argyl was flower girl.

Andrew Gum, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Gum of Midland, Mich. was ringbearer.

Thomas McWilliams of R.D. 1, Pen Argyl was best man. Ushers were Robert McWilliams, Donald Knitter and Ray Mack, all of R.D. 1, Pen Argyl.

A reception was held at the Blue Valley Farm Show Building, Bangor. After a weekend in the Poconos, the couple will be at home in Mainfield, Twp.

The bride attended Pen Argyl High School and is employed by Valerie Fashions of Wind Gap. Her husband was graduated from Pen Argyl High School and is self-employed in farming.

Just Between Us—

By Bobby Westbrook

I had no desire to get stalled in traffic, mill around with teenagers, or especially listen to rock music, but it was a funny feeling weekend to be putting up cup hooks and doing laundry and all the chores that have been piling up.

Like being 20 miles away from an erupting volcano without even seeing the reflected glow in the sky or not bothering to go outdoors to see how it looked during a total eclipse or other types of incredible phenomena.

On the shady back streets in town where people still sit in rockers on the few front porches that haven't been converted into stoops with wrought-iron railings, it was extraordinarily peaceful.

Downtown there were a few more long-haired, backpacking young people than usual but not more than warm weekends last summer. There was a battered hearse parked in the municipal parking lot, and the AAUW Book Fair had a lot more young people in buying books than in normal years.

But then they had more people buying more books, anyway. But otherwise there was little indication that a temporary city about five times the size of the Stroudsburgs had sprung up over night.

I kept wondering whether those worried parents had found their runaway daughters, a far harder job than locating a needle in a haystack where the straws and needles aren't all milling around while you're looking, and where I would have started looking in their place.

But mostly I just felt old to be so contented to be out of it.

STOMACH AILMENTS

By Dr. Thomas F. Snyder D.C.
Stomach ailments include a wide variety — vomiting, headache, burning pains, dizziness, bloating, constipation, etc.

All stomach functions are controlled by nerve impulses and when stomach ailments exist it may be because of nerve impulse interference.

The Chiropractor locates the point in the spine where nerve interference exists due to misaligned vertebrae, and through proper adjustment by hand, to restore the misaligned vertebrae to its normal position.

The Slim Gourmet

BY BARBARA GIBBONS

The Turkish cook who first created Shish Kebab probably didn't drink martinis, so he never knew what dry vermouth could do for this exotic outdoor lamb dish. Savory seasoned cubes of lamb soaked in white wine, roasted on skewers... try this at your next cookout:

Slim Gourmet Shish Kebab

Leg of lamb, boned and cut into two-inch cubes
1 cup dry vermouth
2 teaspoons garlic salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
2 teaspoons dried oregano
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce water (if needed)

Have your butcher remove the bone from a leg of lamb, trim all fat and cut the meat into cubes. Put the meat into a deep nonmetallic bowl. Combine all remaining ingredients and pour over meat. Meat should be just covered; add a little water to the marinade if necessary. Put the bowl in your refrigerator and allow the meat to marinate at least five hours.

Remove the meat from the marinade and string on skewers. Grill over hot coals for 20 minutes, turning frequently. Baste occasionally with reserved marinade. Each four-ounce serving is 230 calories.

ABOUT LAMB CALORIES

— Did you know that many cuts of lamb are as caloric as beef and pork? If you're a calorie-wise cook, you'll want to make this dish from the leg of lamb, a lean and tender dieter's delight. One pound of cooked meat from the leg of lamb is only 891 calories. Compare that with these other lamb cuts (meat only): loin chops, 1,019; rib chops, 1,330; arm chops, 1,152; and blade chops, 1,280. The difference between leg of lamb and rib of lamb is more than 400 calories a pound!

With that in mind, here's another calorie-saver, based on lamb. This time... a whole leg of lamb, boned and tied, barbecued to tender succulence in a tomato-spiked sauce.

Slim Gourmet Barbecued Leg of Lamb

Leg of lamb, boned and tied Garlic salt
Coarse ground pepper
1 cup plain tomato sauce
1/2 cup catsup
1 cup chopped onion
1 tablespoon brown sugar
1 tablespoon oil
Sprinkle lamb with garlic

Mrs. Heino Fette
(Memory Studio)

Miss Gloria Vince bride of Heino Fette

MOUNT POCONO — The Lutheran Church of Our Savior, Mount Pocono was the setting on July 8 at noon for the wedding ceremony uniting Miss Gloria Vince to Heino Fette.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose J. Vince, Sterling Road, Mount Pocono. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Adolf Ramke, R.D., Tobyhanna.

Rev. Lawrence E. Kelm performed the double ring ceremony. The church altar was decorated with arrangements of white majestic daisies and yellow daisy pom-pom chrysanthemums.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of white chiffon with pleated and shirred bodice and Juliet sleeves. Venise lace and matching ribbon accented the empire waist, neckline and sleeves. A Camelot lace cap held her shoulder length bouffant veil of imported French illusion. She carried a colonial hand bouquet of yellow sweetheart roses with white daisies and baby breath.

Miss Mary Lynn Vince, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a similarly styled gown of buttercup yellow. Her headpiece consisted of a buttercup yellow lace and ribbon bow. She carried a hand bouquet of orange matadore sweetheart roses and yellow daisies.

Harold Miller of Mount Pocono was best man. Patt Vince, sister of the bride, was in charge of the guest book. She was presented a corsage of orange sweetheart roses.

The bride's mother wore a street-length dress of beige chiffon with brown accessories and wore a corsage of yellow and orange roses. The bridegroom's mother wore a pale blue knit street length dress with matching accessories and wore a corsage of pink and variegated red and white roses.

Immediately following the ceremony a buffet luncheon was held in the church social hall. The three-tier wedding cake was decorated with white and yellow roses in the wedding color scheme. The wedding table was decorated with a centerpiece of matadore sweetheart roses, yellow daisies and white snapdragons. Guests tables were decorated with floral arrangements of yellow daisies and white snapdragons.

The bride and groom are both graduates of Pocono Mountain High School. The bride is employed as a secretary by Pal-Car Construction, Pocono Lake.

Pocono Pines area has its own historian

POCONO PINES — The early history of the Pocono Pines region is included in the recently published book "Changing Times in the Poconos: 1882-1972" written by Emma LaBarre Miller Waygood, Smith College, 1914.

The book, illustrated with many old pictures, also tells of the beginnings of many resorts in the area.

It was in 1882, for instance, that 500 acres was named "Naomi Pines" by Thomas T. Miller of Easton. He chose "Naomi" from the Bible story of Ruth and Naomi, and "Pines" to protect them from being lumbered by Ike Stauffer, then called "King of the Poconos," the author records.

The name was changed by his son, Thomas T. Miller, to Pocono Pines in 1902.

The book also contains stories of lumbering in the area and ice cutting on the lakes, and the formation of Lake Naomi.

It records the history of the Pocono Pines Assembly in 1902 by Dr. Rufus Miller with the help of Stroudsburg and East Stroudsburg businessmen. In 1918, the property was taken over for recuperation and vocational training for World War II Veterans.

The property was purchased by the Lutheran Conference and Camp Assn. in 1926, and named Lutherland, later changed to Pocono Crest. The latest sale was in 1969 to a group from Wilkes-Barre with the mortgage held by a Philadelphia bank.

Lake Naomi on the other hand has been developed independently. The book brings its history up to date since its purchase in 1963 by Robert Steele of Mountain Lakes, N.J. who bought 2,600 acres. Mrs. Weygood has also told stories of the early Pocono Schools, the origin of Pocono Manor and Pocono Lake Preserve and how they have changed over the years, as well as of the camps, old hotels and shops, the churches and local organizations.

Ann Landers

Professional considerations

Dear Ann: I was fascinated by that very candid letter from the woman who wanted to know if prostitution is legal in Nevada. I was surprised to learn that it is, in some counties.

Since the woman who wrote did so in good faith and you answered her graciously, I'd like to make some comparisons that might be helpful to anyone who is considering the oldest profession.

Like a doctor, she will be on call 24 hours a day. Like a ballplayer, her productivity will be limited to a few years.

Like an insurance salesman, she will have to split her commission with an agent.

Like a mailman, she will be expected to work regardless of the weather.

I'll bet your readers could add to the list and come up with some dillies. Will you print them if they do?

Chicago

Dear Chic: PROBABLY NOT. But thanks for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: There's another side of the story beside the one expressed by the young widow who married a man with three "impossible brats."

Ten years ago I married a widower with five children. I had two of my own. My husband's brood ranged from 14 to six. When I married their father, these children were stealing, smoking pot and having trouble with teachers and neighbors. They were rebellious and disrespectful. Deep down I knew why. They had been deprived of a mother for most of their lives and they were bitter and undisciplined.

Within a week after I married and moved into our new home with my two youngsters, one of my stepdaughters told me she hated me because I had married her father "for his money." Another step-daughter broke my little boy's nose. The ten-year-old stole $15 from my purse. The six-year-old set fire to the garage.

I was determined to conquer the situation with love and understanding. The first thing I did was call a family meeting and lay down rules. The children acted mad but they really loved it. No one had ever set limits for them and they viewed my toughness as a sign that I cared. From then on it was a matter of keeping my word, serving as referee, counselor and above all, a loving presence.

Today these children are good citizens, good students, and I am immensely proud of them. My husband calls me the Miracle Worker. I say the change in their lives was no miracle, it was the natural by-product of love.

Cleveland Mom

Dear Mom: What can I say... except... BEAUTIFUL!

Dear Ann Landers: I rarely miss your column but apparently I missed one recently because I read a follow-up letter which threw me.

It seems a young man from Louisville wanted additional information about males who could not urinate in public. Will you please tell me why anyone would want to do a thing like that? In fact such an act would probably get a person arrested where I come from. Straighten me out, Ann.

Houston Suburbanite

Dear Suburbanite: The letter you missed was from a young fellow who was being drafted. He confessed to a longtime psychological block which prevented him from urinating in the presence of others. He was referring to public REST ROOMS, not streets. When I published his letter I was staggered by the hundreds of letters from men who said they, too, had the problem. It is called a bashful kidney. I was deluged with solutions.

Dear Ann Landers: My boyfriend and his parents are planning a cross country trip in a trailer. He invited me to go along. There would be his parents, his sister, Josh and me. Josh and I are both 17. I asked my folks and they said it would be O.K.

Now Josh tells me his folks have changed their minds. I am very upset. My folks wonder what their reason was. Should they call John's folks and ask?

—Disappointed

Dear Dis: No. Josh's folks should have called your folks and issued the invitation. Since they did not, you were not actually invited.

Erma Bombeck

Young don't laugh?

Telling my kids a joke is like tickling Jane Fonda with an Indian feather. They sit there like a mask of tragedy with a migraine and demand, "What's so funny about that?"

To me, it is rather frightening to imagine that if a poll were taken tomorrow among our young people, their favorite humorists would be Dan Rather and Pauline Frederick.

My husband says I am an alarmist. He says young people do too laugh. They are just a little more serious and involved in current affairs.

To prove a point, he collared one of our sons the other night and snickered, "Hey, son, why does a chicken cross the road?"

"Who wants to know?" asked my son, his eyes narrowing suspiciously. "This isn't a question on the last census, is it?"

"Of course not," said my husband.

"What kind of a chicken is it?" he continued.

"That's not important." "Ralph Nader thinks chickens are important. He did an investigation that proved..."

"This has nothing to do with Ralph Nader. It's a joke." "Is this a Polish chicken?" he asked. "Because if it is, ethnic humor isn't..."

"It is not a Polish chicken," said his father patiently.

"Well to begin with, it's against the law to let a chicken run loose..."

"For crying out loud..."

"In the second place, the chicken would never get across the road. Statistics show there were more highway deaths last year than..."

"Will you stop being so serious about a lousy chicken?" shouted his father.

"You'd be serious, too," he said. "If you were a poultry grower. Do you know chickens are cheaper than lunch meat? It hardly pays to grow them..."

"Look," said his father,

Watergate concerts scheduled

COLUMBIA, N.J. — The first of the Watergate Concerts at the Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area will be held at 7 p.m. today.

The concert will feature Larry Gold, who will perform Bach, Beethoven, and Shostakovich on his Testori cello, built in Italy in 1642.

Other concerts are scheduled for July 15, featuring Elizabethan lute songs by Ruth Silin; July 22, featuring Edward Brewer, harpsichordist; August 5 and August 12.

Free tickets can be obtained by writing to AFE, Box 26, Columbia, N.J. 07832.

Students nix divorce

MANILA (UPI) — The majority of students at the Mindanao State University, in the southern Philippines, are against legalizing divorce in the Philippines, according to a survey conducted from January to April this year.

"The chicken is nothing special... It was raised to be cheap, diseased, and dumb enough to cross the road just for the sake of the joke. Now, why would he cross the road?"

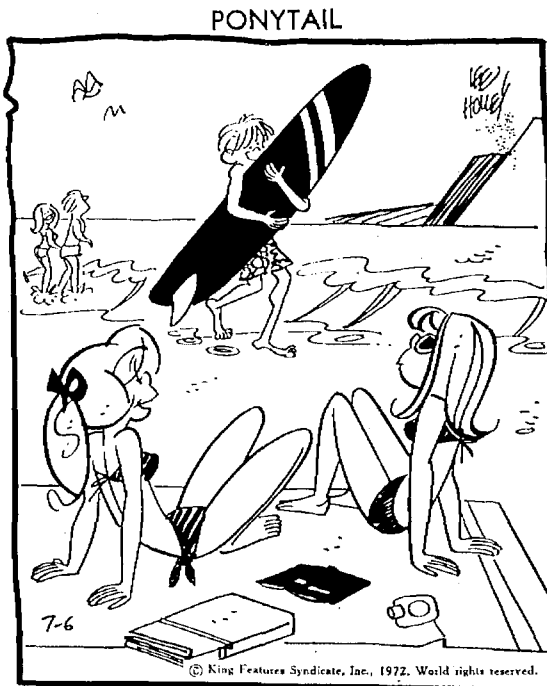

Our son shrugged his shoulder.

"TO GET TO THE OTHER SIDE," said his father, slapping him on the back.

"Are you saying that the chicken is aiding and abetting the enemy by defecting to another power?"

His father slumped in a chair and buried his head in his hands.

"You don't have to get so uptight about a chicken you don't even know, Dad. Just come on and tell me the end of the joke."

"Golly, I wish he'd hold ME like that!"

Rooney asks welfare aid

Foreign tourists

WASHINGTON — Rep. Fred B. Rooney (D-Bethlehem) has requested Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz to make free food stamps available to Pennsylvania welfare recipients whose assistance checks are stalled by state budget deliberations.

Rooney said he took this action after welfare recipients contacted his office, seeking assistance from hardships created by the delay of welfare checks.

He consulted with Gov. Milton Shapp's liaison office in Washington and learned that state Department of Public Welfare officials are to meet in the near future with the USDA regional administrator to discuss the food stamp problem.

NEW YORK (UPI) — A total of 87,346 foreign tourists visited Korea in the first four months of this year, a 39 per cent increase over the corresponding period of 1971, according to figures released here by the Korean Transportation Ministry. The visitors spent $19,133,000, a 30 per cent increase over the $14,733,000 expenditures during the first third of 1971.

WINDJAMMER IN THE BAHAMAS

Picture yourself aboard the beautiful 84-ft. windjammer "Gulliver", as she romps before the Trade Winds under a cloud of snowy canvas — in the blue of the open Caribbean — or scudding majestically between green islands. Old salt or newcomer — this is sailing at its glorious best! Enjoy yourself! Enjoy the sun, the salt air, the cool evening breezes, and the good companionship. Help us set sail if you like, or try a trick at the wheel — even if you have never sailed before!

The "Gulliver" will anchor early in the afternoon to give you plenty of time to swim, skin and SCUBA dive, water ski and beach comb and explore ashore. Each day's destination is lovelier than the last. The Windswept beaches, towering palms, and coral reefs shimmering in water as clear as air, are a photographer's delight.

When the sun sets over the yardarm, it's time for all hands to head for the main salon. What a surprise! If you were expecting a straight fish diet — you were wrong! The only fish served here is the fish you catch (prepared by the ship's cook) Steaks, roasts, spaghetti, chops, etc., — all served family style, will remind you of the last time you had dinner in a fine New York restaurant (except that you are wearing a tee-shirt and cut-off shorts). In the evening there may be a native band tuning up ashore, group singing on the afterdeck, or a beach party — all under the myriad stars on a tropical night.

Tomorrow will be another day — a day of adventure at a leisurely pace.

Two cruises are planned. Teenage cruise — week of July 23rd. Adult cruise — week of July 30th. For information, contact Mr. John Jacobi, P.O. Box 631, Stroudsburg. Phone 421-6781 evenings.

Ann Landers

Professional considerations

Dear Ann: I was fascinated by that very candid letter from the woman who wanted to know if prostitution is legal in Nevada. I was surprised to learn that it is, in some counties.

Since the woman who wrote did so in good faith and you answered her graciously, I'd like to make some comparisons that might be helpful to anyone who is considering the oldest profession.

Like a doctor, she will be on call 24 hours a day.

Like a ballplayer, her productivity will be limited to a few years.

Like an insurance salesman, she will have to split her commission with an agent.

Like a mailman, she will be expected to work regardless of the weather.

I'll bet your readers could add to the list and come up with some dillies. Will you print them if they do?

Chicago

Dear Chic: PROBABLY NOT. But thanks for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: There's another side of the story beside the one expressed by the young widow who married a man with three "impossible brats."

Ten years ago I married a widower with five children. I had two of my own. My husband's brood ranged from 14 to six. When I married their father, these children were stealing, smoking pot and having trouble with teachers and neighbors. They were rebellious and disrespectful. Deep down I knew why. They had been deprived of a mother for most of their lives and they were bitter and undisciplined.

Within a week after I married and moved into our new home with my two youngsters, one of my stepdaughters told me she hated me because I had married her father "for his money." Another step-daughter broke my little boy's nose. The ten-year-old stole $15 from my purse. The six-year-old set fire to the garage.

I was determined to conquer the situation with love and understanding. The first thing I did was call a family meeting and lay down rules. The children acted mad but they really loved it. No one had ever set limits for them and they viewed my toughness as a sign that I cared. From then on it was a matter of keeping my word, serving as referee, counselor and above all, a loving presence.

Today these children are good citizens, good students, and I am immensely proud of them. My husband calls me the Miracle Worker. I say the change in their lives was no miracle, it was the natural by-product of love.

Cleveland Mom

Dear Mom: What can I say... except... BEAUTIFUL!

Dear Ann Landers: I rarely miss your column but apparently I missed one recently because I read a follow-up letter which threw me.

It seems a young man from Louisville wanted additional information about males who could not urinate in public. Will you please tell me why anyone would want to do a thing like that? In fact such an act would probably get a person arrested where I come from. Straighten me out, Ann.

Houston Suburbanite

Dear Suburbanite: The letter you missed was from a young fellow who was being drafted. He confessed to a longtime psychological block which prevented him from urinating in the presence of others. He was referring to public REST ROOMS, not streets. When I published his letter I was staggered by the hundreds of letters from men who said they, too, had the problem. It is called a bashful kidney. I was deluged with solutions.

Dear Ann Landers: My boyfriend and his parents are planning a cross country trip in a trailer. He invited me to go along. There would be his parents, his sister, Josh and me. Josh and I are both 17. I asked my folks and they said it would be O.K.

Now Josh tells me his folks have changed their minds. I am very upset. My folks wonder what their reason was. Should they call John's folks and ask?

—Disappointed

Dear Dis: No. Josh's folks should have called your folks and issued the invitation. Since they did not, you were not actually invited.

Erma Bombeck

Young don't laugh?

Telling my kids a joke is like tickling Jane Fonda with an Indian feather. They sit there like a mask of tragedy with a migraine and demand, "What's so funny about that?"

To me, it is rather frightening to imagine that if a poll were taken tomorrow among our young people, their favorite humorists would be Dan Rather and Pauline Frederick.

My husband says I am an alarmist. He says young people do too laugh. They are just a little more serious and involved in current affairs.

To prove a point, he collared one of our sons the other night and snickered, "Hey, son, why does a chicken cross the road?"

"Who wants to know?" asked my son, his eyes narrowing suspiciously. "This isn't a question on the last census, is it?"

"Of course not," said my husband.

"What kind of a chicken is it?" he continued.

"That's not important." "Ralph Nader thinks chickens are important. He did an investigation that proved."

"This has nothing to do with Ralph Nader. It's a joke."

"Is this a Polish chicken?" he asked. "Because if it is, ethnic humor isn't."

Opening lead — queen of spades.

In some hands, declarer must make what appears to be an irresponsible play in order to give himself the best chance for the contract. Fortunately, such hands come few and far between — or we would all be nervous wrecks — but when the occasion does arise and declarer manages to meet the challenge, it is very pleasant to report the event.

Consider this deal played in a team of four championship. South was the renowned Australian star, Tim Seres, who optimistically leaped to four hearts after West's preemptive two spade bid had been passed around to him.

West led the queen of spades and Seres made the extraordinary play of a low spade from dummy! East discarded a club and then ruffed dummy's king of spades when West continued with the jack at trick two.

East did as well as he could when he shifted to a diamond, but Seres was now in full command. He won the diamond return with the ace, drew three rounds of trumps, and finessed the nine of spades. After discarding his diamond loser on the ace of spades, Seres led a club to the king and thus brought home the contract. The only tricks he lost were two spades and a club.

The contract would have failed had Seres made the instinctive play of the king of spades from dummy at trick one. East would ruff and return a diamond, and declarer would eventually lose four tricks consisting of the opening spade ruff, a club, a diamond and another spade.

The bidding:

Opening lead — queen of spades.

In some hands, declarer must make what appears to be an irresponsible play in order to give himself the best chance for the contract. Fortunately, such hands come few and far between — or we would all be nervous wrecks — but when the occasion does arise and declarer manages to meet the challenge, it is very pleasant to report the event.

Consider this deal played in a team of four championship. South was the renowned Australian star, Tim Seres, who optimistically leaped to four hearts after West's preemptive two spade bid had been passed around to him.

West led the queen of spades and Seres made the extraordinary play of a low spade from dummy! East discarded a club and then ruffed dummy's king of spades when West continued with the jack at trick two.

East did as well as he could when he shifted to a diamond, but Seres was now in full command. He won the diamond return with the ace, drew three rounds of trumps, and finessed the nine of spades. After discarding his diamond loser on the ace of spades, Seres led a club to the king and thus brought home the contract. The only tricks he lost were two spades and a club.

The contract would have failed had Seres made the instinctive play of the king of spades from dummy at trick one. East would ruff and return a diamond, and declarer would eventually lose four tricks consisting of the opening spade ruff, a club, a diamond and another spade.

New York's Voice of Broadway

NEW YORK — Arthur Treacher appeared rather dour . . . Not unusual for Arthur, who has never been the back-slapper type . . . But he was nostalgic about his 50 years in showbiz, and so, the other day, we got an earful from the man who is such a fine actor that everyone thinks he's a butler.

"With all the careers that I have had in my 78 years," says Arthur, "I don't know if I'm moving steadily upward or suffering one demotion after another. After a 4½-year stint in the World War (the First, that is) I started my adult life as an actor, then became known as a professional butler, was reborn as a television 'personality' and now, in my advanced age, appear destined to end my days as a fishmonger, considering that there are now some 200 Arthur Treacher's Fish and Chips restaurants in the U.S.A.

"In my youth, my father had ideas of making a lawyer out of me, so I was apprenticed to his firm. When I got out of the service in the early 1920's, I decided I didn't want to marry the vicar's daughter and spend my life in some dreary little English town, subsisting on a diet of tea and crumpets, which I loathe.

I had always wanted to be an actor so I started doing auditions and finally got a job as a chorus boy in a musical directed by Sir Clark Cochran. My qualifications were impressive. He wanted men over six feet tall who were ex-officers. I was both. The fact that I hadn't yet learned to sing or dance didn't seem to bother him.

"In 1926, the Shuberts — bless them — brought me to this land of milk and honey to appear with Mitzi Hajas in a little recognized masterpiece called 'Lieutenant Gus.' It was so unrecognized that it never got produced, and I went to the old Winter Garden in 'Great Temptations of 1926' instead. A few other unknowns in the show were a fiddle player named Jack Benny, and Jay C. Flippen, Penny Singleton and Billy Van. I played in all the skits but declined to dance. After all, I was a featured player, and every American chorus girl I saw was a hell of a lot better dancer than I was.

"It was the usual this and that on Broadway until 1933 when I went to what was then billed as the dream capital of the world — Hollywood. I must admit that my trip was not the result of frantic offers from eager studios. Actually, Odette Myrtil, a star of the day and a good friend, wanted her car driven to the coast.

"The movie studios didn't fling their doors open, so I joined a repertory company headed by a fellow Englishman, E. E. Olive. An unknown named Walter Pidgeon was competing with me for parts. It was a profit-sharing affair and I earned seven dollars the first week and 11 the next. From then on it was all downhill.

"My knocking at studio doors finally resulted in a bit as a valet in a short with Ruth Etting. My first role as a full-fledged butler was for MGM in 'Hollywood Party,' with Lupe Velez, Jimmy Durante, and lord knows who else. And that is when my much vaunted characterization was born. I was bored sick with the idiotic role. I resented getting up at 4 in the morning to stand around a cold studio all day without a solitary drink waiting to do my 2-minute scene. I guess I showed my feelings, and Chuck Reisner, the director, called me aside and said, 'You're bored, aren't you?' 'To death,' I replied. 'Well, play it that way,' he said. And that's how the 'bored butler' that I played in over 30 films was born.

"It wasn't a bad life being a butler though. The part was good and I didn't have to live in. Fortunately, in those days, script writers were fond of including a gentlemen's gentleman in many of their efforts. Today, of course, a man could starve to death attempting to play that dying trade on the screen.

"My tenure as a TV talk show participant started in the early days of the square box with innumerable guest appearances with Jack Paar. As a matter of fact I told a joke on that show which one Jack 'Brian' characterized in his column as 'vulgar.' You did add, however, that I was still welcome in your living room, for which I was grateful. It indicates television's attitude at the time to recall that I stole the joke from the Reader's Digest and it could be told today at a Sunday School picnic."

How about his run with Merv Griffin?

"That was a very rewarding, 5-year relationship," recalls Arthur. "I believe in long engagements. As a matter of fact, I'm just too lazy to look for work. Jack, I'm sure you will remember that first year. I was godawful. I just didn't know what I was doing. But, I've been told that things got better as time went on. I had a lot of fun on the show — most of the time. "I remember one night, though, when I went on, for some outlandish reason, without a single drink. I had none in the course of the evening, and when it was over I told Merv, 'You know, cold sober, this show is a bloody bore.'"

"When I finally left Merv they ran him out of New York and he had to take up residence in Hollywood. I visit the dear boy from time to time to bolster his efforts.

WORST FLOOD ON RECORD! CAUSES 2 BILLION DOLLAR DAMAGES!
CLOSES ROSEN FURNITURE STORES IN WILKES-BARRE AND DANVILLE

EMERGENCY FLOOD SALE!

A PERSONAL MESSAGE FROM HERBERT ROSEN, VICE PRESIDENT OF ROSEN'S FURNITURE

Never before in the history of Rosen's Furniture have we faced such a threat to our survival. Two of our stores have been closed by the recent disastrous floods. Two warehouses have been inundated by water. Our uninsured losses may run to $500,000. We know we share this problem with over 250,000 other residents of Northeast Pennsylvania and are trying to help in the best way we can in the communities of Wilkes-Barre and Danville.

We're thankful that three of our stores and several warehouses were untouched. The flooding has, however cut our volume of business almost in half. We must regain as much of this now with the stores that are left if we are to survive this critical period. Payrolls must be met. Merchandise continues to flow in. And we must put our Wilkes-Barre and Danville stores in shape to reopen as soon as possible.

So, over the next few weeks, we must raise as much cash as we possible can. There is only one way to do this — cut prices on a good deal of our present stock to move it out as fast as possible. Come and check over the buys we have. Delivery is free in most instances and financing can be arranged.

Right now Rosen's Furniture is in a fight for its life. We fully intend to be around in 46 years for our 100th anniversary. We expect to survive now in the same way we had previously prospered — by bringing you the best values possible and providing complete personal service.

Please stop in.

Officials warn to be on alert

Phony FCC men take radios

By SKIP TAGGART
Pocono Record Reporter
STROUDSBURG — Two well dressed men, purporting to be from the Federal Communications Commission, were recently in the Stroudsburg area and confiscated some equipment from a local Citizen's Band radio operator.

What's so unusual about that?

The Federal Communications Commission doesn't know anything about it.

District agent Richard Smith said his office has not investigated any complaints of abuse of the airwaves in Monroe County recently and said the name of the alleged agent who took the equipment was not familiar to him.

The Stroudsburg man who lost the equipment to the "agents" wished to remain anonymous until he decides whether to prosecute the men or not. He says since their visit he has found out who they are. He also says they are from the Bethlehem area.

The "agents" apparently did not pick their victim indiscriminately. During the recent flood watch in the Poconos due to Tropical Storm Agnes, a Citizen's Band radio club, the Emergency Communications Help and Organized Search (ECHOS), was operating out of the Civil Defense headquarters office in the county courthouse.

While members of the club were watching area streams and quelling the fears of residents on other radio operators on an adjacent frequency were causing some interference. At one point, according to club members, one of the interfering operators began using profane and obscene language over the air.

After the emergency was over there was some talk among the radio club members of taking action against the offending operator. This action would come in the form of a complaint filed with the FCC. No one seemed certain of who the actual offender was and a number of names were mentioned. The man whom the "agents" came to visit was one.

"They woke me up early in the morning last week and asked me if I was so-and-so," he said. "Then they started asking me if I was on the air at such and such a time and I told them I was. I finally asked them who they were and what they wanted. One of the men showed me a card with his name on it and it had 'Federal Communications Commission' on the top.

"They read a couple of paragraphs out of a handbook about the use of radio equipment and then said they were going to take my equipment and a summons in the mail. I told them I had a lot of money in that equipment and wouldn't let it out of the house without a receipt so they just took the microphones."

The "agents" never asked him for his proper name, mailing address or to see his operator's license.

Monroe County Commissioner Arlington (Bud)

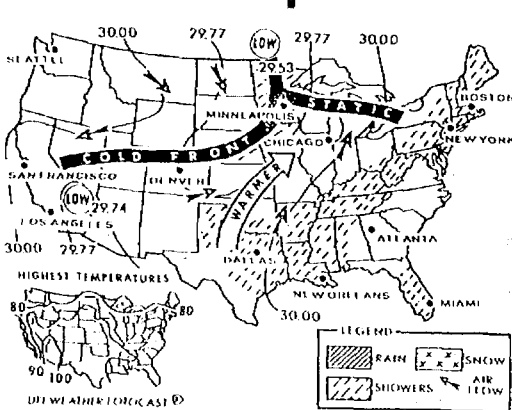

Martin said the commissioners office had no knowledge of any complaint filed as a result of the Civil Defense operation on or about June 22.

C. Marshall Reese, acting Civil Defense Director during the emergency said, "I did not, as Civil Defense Director, file any complaint."

Reese did say, however, there were reports of "severe and flagrant instances" of interference during the communications effort at the peak of the flood threat in Monroe County.

Obituaries Drowned youth found

STROUDSBURG — The body of Gary Edwin Fisher, 18, of R.D. 2 Stroudsburg, who drowned on July 3 in the Delaware River at Shawnee, was found on Saturday at Eilenbergers Landing in Minisink Hills, police said.

Born in East Stroudsburg, he was a son of H. Edwin and Alberta (Williams) Fisher, with whom he resided. He had lived in this area all his life and was a graduate of Stroudsburg Area High School.

He was a member of the Arlington Wesley United Methodist Church, Stroud Township. He was a former employe at Beseckers Diner, Snyder'sville and for the past three months had been employed by the Bendix Construction Company, Shawnee.

In addition to his parents, he is survived by a sister, Mrs. Susan L. Shelton of West Palm Beach, Fla.; a brother, Trent E. Fisher, at home; his paternal grandmother, Mrs. Susan Fisher of East Stroudsburg; maternal grandmother, Mildred and step grandfather, Chester Van Why of Stroudsburg.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a.m. Monday in the William H. Clark Funeral Home, 1003 Main Street, Stroudsburg, with the Rev. David L. Burkhardt and Rev. Harold Burkelt officiating. Burial will be in the Stroudsburg Cemetery, Stroudsburg.

Horwell Jory

BETHLEHEM — Horwell W. "Top" Jory, 64, of Harding Ave., Pen Argyl, died Sunday morning in St. Luke's Hospital in Bethlehem.

He was the husband of the late Annette Sames Jory, who died in 1944, and is survived by his second wife, the former Sara Marsh, at home.

Jory was the son of the late John and Clara (Horwell) Jory of Pen Argyl and was a member of the Methodist faith. He was employed at M and M Contractors.

He is survived by three sons, John, of Mt. Bethel; William, of Wind Gap; and Wesley, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.; one brother, Horace Hawkey, of Bethlehem, and five grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a.m. Wednesday from the James B. Caffney Funeral Home, 200 Robinson Ave., Pen Argyl, with the Rev. Harold J. Hallam officiating.

Viewing will be after 7 p.m. Tuesday at the funeral home. Burial will be in the Fairview Cemetery in Pen Argyl.

Phony FCC men take radios

By SKIP TAGGART
Pocono Record Reporter
STROUDSBURG — Two well dressed men, purporting to be from the Federal Communications Commission, were recently in the Stroudsburg area and confiscated some equipment from a local Citizen's Band radio operator.

What's so unusual about that?

The Federal Communications Commission doesn't know anything about it.

District agent Richard Smith said his office has not investigated any complaints of abuse of the airwaves in Monroe County recently and said the name of the alleged agent who took the equipment was not familiar to him.

The Stroudsburg man who lost the equipment to the "agents" wished to remain anonymous until he decides whether to prosecute the men or not. He says since their visit he has found out who they are. He also says they are from the Bethlehem area.

The "agents" apparently did not pick their victim indiscriminately. During the recent flood watch in the Poconos due to Tropical Storm Agnes, a Citizen's Band radio club, the Emergency Communications Help and Organized Search (ECHOS), was operating out of the Civil Defense headquarters office in the county courthouse.

While members of the club were watching area streams and quelling the fears of residents other radio operators on an adjacent frequency were causing some interference. At one point, according to club members, one of the interfering operators began using profane and obscene language over the air.

After the emergency was over there was some talk among the radio club members of taking action against the offending operator. This action would come in the form of a complaint filed with the FCC. No one seemed certain of who the actual offender was and a number of names were mentioned. The man whom the "agents" came to visit was one.

"They woke me up early in the morning last week and asked me if I was so-and-so," he said. "Then they started asking me if I was on the air at such and such a time and I told them I was. I finally asked them who they were and what they wanted. One of the men showed me a card with his name on it and it had 'Federal Communications Commission' on the top."

"They read a couple of paragraphs out of a handbook about the use of radio equipment and then said they were going to take my equipment and I would receive a receipt and a summons in the mail. I told them I had a lot of money in that equipment and wouldn't let it out of the house without a receipt so they just took the microphones."

The "agents" never asked him for his proper name, mailing address or to see his operator's license.

Monroe County Commissioner Arlington (Bud)

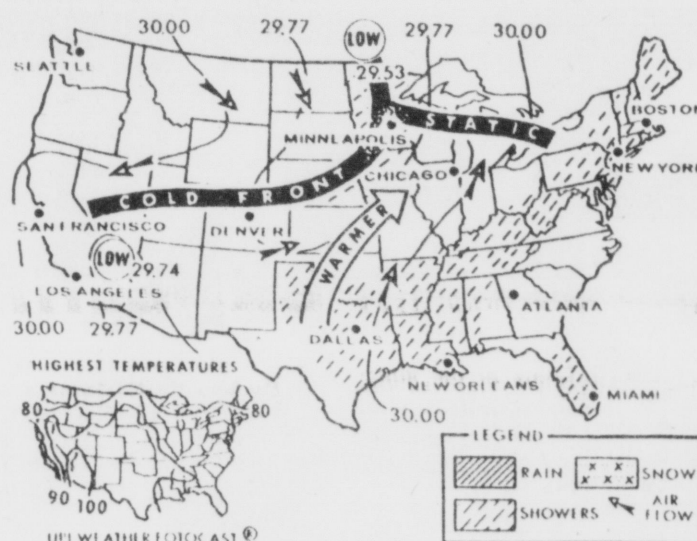

Martin said the commissioners office had no knowledge of any complaint filed as a result of the Civil Defense operation on or about June 22.

C. Marshall Reese, acting Civil Defense Director during the emergency said, "I did not, as Civil Defense Director, file any complaint."

Reese did say, however, there were reports of "severe and flagrant instances" of interference during the communications effort at the peak of the flood threat in Monroe County.

Obituaries

Drowned youth found

STROUDSBURG — The body of Gary Edwin Fisher, 18, of R.D. 2 Stroudsburg, who drowned on July 3 in the Delaware River at Shawnee, was found on Saturday at Eilenbergers Landing in Minisink Hills, police said.

Born in East Stroudsburg, he was a son of H. Edwin and Alberta (Williams) Fisher, with whom he resided. He had lived in this area all his life and was a graduate of Stroudsburg Area High School.

He was a member of the Arlington Wesley United Methodist Church, Stroud Township. He was a former employee at Beseckers Diner, Snyder'sville and for the past three months had been employed by the Bendixen Construction Company, Shawnee.

In addition to his parents, he is survived by a sister, Mrs. Susan P. Shelton of West Palm Beach, Fla.; a brother, Trent E. Fisher, at home; his paternal grandmother, Mrs. Susan Fisher of East Stroudsburg; maternal grandmother, Mildred and step grandfather, Van Why of Stroudsburg.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a.m. Monday in the William H. Clark Funeral Home, 1003 Main Street, Stroudsburg, with the Rev. David L. Burkhardt and Rev. Harold Burkett officiating.

Burial will be in the Stroudsburg Cemetery, Stroudsburg.

Horwell Jory

BETHLEHEM — Horwell W. "Top" Jory, 64, of Harding Ave., Pen Argyl, died Sunday morning in St. Luke's Hospital in Bethlehem.

He was the husband of the late Annette Sames Jory, who died in 1944, and is survived by his second wife, the former Sara Marsh, at home.

Jory was the son of the late John and Clara (Horwell) Jory of Pen Argyl and was a member of the Methodist faith. He was employed at M and M Contractors.

He is survived by three sons, John, of Bethel; William, of Wind Gap; and Wesley, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.; one brother, Horace Hawkey, of Bethlehem, and five grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a.m. Wednesday from the James B. Caffney Funeral Home, 200 Robinson Ave., Pen Argyl, with the Rev. Harold J. Hallam officiating.

Viewing will be after 7 p.m. Tuesday at the funeral home.

Burial will be in the Fairview Cemetery in Pen Argyl.

Write to know

The people in The Pocono Record circulation area have a "Write to Know" — and The Record will try to provide the answers in the "Write to Know" column. The column, designed to answer any questions or solve any problems (consumer, government or anything else) will appear every Monday on the first page of the second section. Send all questions to "Write to Know," The Pocono Record, 511 Lenox St., Stroudsburg, Pa. 18360. Questions should be in writing and signed. No telephone calls, please.

Q. — My husband works in New York City and travels back and forth to the city each day. A friend of his said he could claim a deduction from his income tax for the tolls he pays crossing the bridge each day. Is this true?

Mrs. L.D., Columbia, N.J.

A. — Yes, it is. The Internal Revenue Service accepts claims of this type as deductible. If your husband pays cash to cross the bridge or tollway each day he should get a receipt from the bridge attendant each time. If he purchases commuter tickets, he should save the empty books. They act as receipts in themselves. There may also be other associated costs of traveling back and forth to work that are deductible. You should contact a certified public accountant or your nearest IRS office to find out what is deductible and what is not. The money saved each year through the services of a CPA could very well be worth the service fee in your husband's case.

Q. — Could you please print the veteran's story of a deck of cards being his Bible?

Mrs. F.W.H., East Stroudsburg

A. — We assume you mean the story of a young private who was brought before his commanding officer for playing cards during church services. Due to its length we cannot print it in this column. However, there is a record you can order from your nearest disk shop entitled "The Deck of Cards," which is the story you refer to. It's quite a country-and-western classic and you should have no difficulty in obtaining a copy.

Q. — I would like to know exactly what the Head Start school is and the purpose of it. I have been told two different stories.

M.H., Stroudsburg

A. — Since the answer to your question is too lengthy to print in this column, Mrs. Joanna Weaver, director of the Head Start program at the East Stroudsburg State College Campus Learning Center has agreed to fill you in on the program. She can be reached at the CLC any weekday between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Every few weeks, the Consumer Information Service, a youth group from the Stroudsburg Methodist Church, surveys prices at five local supermarkets. (Giant, Acme, IGA, A&P in Stroudsburg, and Victory in East Stroudsburg.) The results of these surveys are printed in a bi-weekly bulletin, which is distributed free to anyone who wishes to have a copy. If any persons would like to obtain a recent survey, they are asked to submit a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Consumer Information Service, Stroudsburg Methodist Church, 547 Main Street, Stroudsburg, Pa., 18360.

Hospital gets share

EAST STROUDSBURG — The General Hospital of Monroe County received approximately 15 to 20 persons Saturday who had sustained injuries at Pocono International Raceway's Concert 10. One was reportedly stabbed.

Two other major injuries, both unconfirmed by hospital and Concert 10 officials, were alleged broken backs suffered by persons climbing scaffolding at the raceway to view the concert but had fallen.

Other injuries treated were cuts from broken glass, broken fingers, arms and ankles. Most of the broken limbs were suffered by gate crashers who leaped to the ground from atop the high fence that surrounds the raceway.

A report from an unofficial source on hand at the hospital said the stabbing victim supposedly inflicted the wound himself during an argument with his girlfriend.

All patients treated at the hospital were flown from the raceway grounds by helicopter. A problem was created after the patients were treated and released, for they had no way of returning to the track to get their cars.

After many repeated pleas, the helicopter returned a few to the area, but others had to find a way back the best they could.

But the Interior Department, entrusted with developing the 52,000-acre park that would surround the Tocks Reservoir, maintains that there would be no difficulty in continuing the park without the dam.

When listening to the arguments of the two agencies, the public should keep in mind that the issue is very speculative, and that each side has a vested interest in pushing its point of view.

The Corps, which is in the business of ridding other

Pocono Record Reporter

LONG POND — It was 5 a.m. Saturday at the tunnel road leading to the infield area of Pocono International Raceway. Groups of four and five Concert 10 goers began arriving at the gate to assure themselves a good stagefront seat.

The groups grew steadily larger and larger until it was impossible to discern them from each other. It became a long procession. First hundreds, then thousands, then...

Security personnel scrambled along the fence trying to catch those who had climbed over without turning in a ticket. According to Raceway General Manager Bill Marvel, most of the fence climbers had tickets — but didn't want to wait at the gate and lose the chance of a good spot in front of the stage.

Farther up the tunnel road some people were running toward the stage area to accomplish the same end, dropping shirts, coats, bedrolls and other belongings along the way. No one turned back to retrieve them. They had to get a good seat.

The sun was still partially hidden behind the morning clouds and the fog was just beginning to burn off. It was impossible to see where the stage was set up from the tunnel exit and many people were running in the wrong direction.

Stage surrounded

Soon the skeleton-like silhouettes of the lighting scaffolds began to roll out of the murky morning and the stage blossomed on the horizon like a Morning Glory. It was surrounded by thousands of festival fans, many already asleep on their blankets.

As the sun pierced the haze the landscape began to come alive with motion. From a distance it appeared the grassy infield of the track was actually breathing.

The gray-green motion slowly began to take on colors: denim blue, pink, purple, white, red and olive green.

Dirty, weary faces atop the kaleidoscope became visible and the sounds of building excitement began stabbing through the eerie quiet which had camouflaged the size of the crowd all morning.

By 9 a.m. the sun was shining brightly on an ocean of humanity, growing larger by the minute. Rivers of people flowed through the entrance gates like sand cascading into a huge hour-glass. Throughout the day — until the rain came — that hour never ended.

Hungry fans, many who had nothing to eat for as long as two days, swarmed upon the concession stands. On one side of a pizza vending truck hundreds waited to fill their empty stomachs.

On the other side of the truck, a young man was selling LSD for those who wished to empty their minds. Business was good on both sides of the truck.

Drugs for sale

Drugs were readily available to anyone who wished to venture into the chemical festival which accompanied the music. Cries of "skag for sale, uppers and downers for those in need," and "you can't hear the music without mescaline" filled the air as the drug hawkers unabashedly marketed their wares. There was no visible effort made by security or law enforcement personnel to arrest them.

The vendors took their toll. The Drug Help Center in the garage area began receiving a steady flow of overdoses, bum trips and people suffering from convulsions. Bad or impure "acid" being sold in the crowd was blamed in part. Inexperienced users made up many of the rest.

Semi-uniformed veterans raised makeshift flags of peace, identification and ecology over small patches of ground they had conquered. An American flag, upside-down in the sign of national distress, whipped lazily in the slight breeze. A sleepy sentry stood watch underneath.

When the music began shortly after 1 p.m., the crowd in front of the stage roared with approval. It was the beginning. Thousands of young people who had traveled from as far away as Florida and California to Long Pond as if it were their Mecca were about to be rewarded for their efforts. Deeper in the crowd there was lesser excitement but a visible interest in the stage. In the fringe areas there was outright complacency about the whole thing.

A rip-off?

A sampling of crowd reaction showed most of the 10,000 to 15,000 people with positions in front of the stage were enthralled with Concert 10. Those farther out had doubts about the $11 price they paid for their tickets and many said "this is the biggest rip-off I've ever seen."

Later in the afternoon it began to rain and the temperature dropped into the low 60s. Stage crews covered the sound equipment with plastic and the fans were told to stay; the concert would resume when the rain stopped.

They met head-on with other latecomers who were still trying to get to the raceway to find what it was all about. After being told, one of the travelers said, "I paid $11 for my ticket and hauled eight hours of —ing traffic to get here. I don't know where I left my car but I'm not gonna leave now, man."

A bone-weary Pennsylvania State Policeman, who had been trying to direct traffic near the raceway for 16 hours, asked "Where did they all come from?" The best answer he could get was, "From everywhere, man. Everywhere."

In the tunnel beneath turn two of the 2.5 mile Pocono tri-oval, a 17-year-old girl from Massachusetts stood soaking wet and shivering. She stared blankly at her ticket stub which read "rain or shine." After muttering a four letter word that reflected her contempt, she said "I'm going home." Thousands followed her.

Many fans abandon cars; traffic snarls seal area

Pocono Record Reporter

LONG POND — Cram about 200,000 people, more than three times the entire population of Monroe County, into about 600 acres and what have you got? Concert 10. Another good answer would be problems; big problems.

One of the first to materialize was traffic congestion. It defied description. Cars were backed up from the Rte. 115 interchange of Interstate 80 west to a few miles from Scotrun, some 13 or 14 miles, from Friday night until well into Saturday morning.

Even New Jersey suffered from the calamity at Long Pond. Traffic in the westbound lanes of I-80 and Rte. 46 in the Garden State was reported backed up from the Delaware Water Gap bridge to Budd Lake. Transportation between New York City and the Poconos could only be called a fiasco.

It all began at approximately 8 p.m. Friday along Rte. 115 and Long Pond Road near the Pocono International Raceway where Concert 10 was held. Music fans exhausted by the tedious drive through all the traffic evidently felt they had gotten close enough to the track to walk in, rather than stick with their autos and park in a designated area.

Cars began parking along the roads wherever they could find room at any angle. Long Pond Road was the first to become blocked when cars met an impasse and could not back out because of more behind them. Concert goers abandoned their autos in the middle of the road and walked miles to the raceway.

Some local residents were also caught and had no choice but to lock up and walk home.

Pennsylvania State Police, unaware the road was closed, kept directing traffic through the artery. By the time they realized what had happened it was too late.

Autos abandoned

It was only a matter of time before the same thing happened to Rte. 115. State police also became trapped in the tie-up and could not get to the places where people were abandoning their cars and order them to keep moving.

A patrol car from the Hazleton barracks attempted to rendezvous with troopers in the area to furnish much needed radio equipment and other traffic control supplies. The car reached the Rte. 115 intersection on Rte. 903 via Lake Harmony, but no one could get through to pick up the supplies. After hours of waiting, it turned back.

Fate sealed

When darkness moved in it sealed the area's fate. Fans, unfamiliar with the area but lucky enough to make it to the raceway with their cars, either ignored or failed to see posted directions to the parking area.

They knew they were at the raceway and that's all they cared about. Most just stopped anywhere and looked for a place to set up camp. When the sun came up Saturday it revealed the parking lot was far from filled, but there was no way to gain access to it anymore.

Late Saturday night portions of Rte. 115 were reopened as concert goers began the long trek homeward. Many of the autos parked along the sides of the road left and permitted traffic to skirt around abandoned vehicles.

Tow trucks finally broke through and pulled the empty cars to vacant lots and open fields where they were left for their owners to find.

By Sunday afternoon a state police spokesman from the Fern Ridge barracks said Long Pond Road and Rte. 115 were both open and "running good." He described the weekend as "just a bunch of madness."

The Troop S. barracks in Mount Pocono reported traffic on I-80 was "heavy but moving" Sunday afternoon. There were still quite a few abandoned cars along that roadway, too.

Rock festival promoters expecting healthy profit

By GARY GROSSMAN

Pocono Record Reporter

LONG POND — The 125,000 tickets sold at $11 each for Saturday's rock music concert at Pocono International Raceway made it perhaps the best money venture of giant rock festivals yet held despite tremendous costs in promotion and production.

Concert 10, a promotion corporation sponsoring the event from New York City, was headed up by Irving Reiss of Los Angeles. Bernard Ruttenberg, a spokesman for Reiss, said the event would turn a profit despite a $300,000 outlay for talent alone.

Production for the affair was handled by "Showco," a group organized two years ago and now operating out of Dallas, Texas with nine productions going throughout the United States and Europe at the same time.

Production coordinator for Showco, David Alley, 26, has been with the group since its inception. He said Showco grossed $85,000 its first year, $400,000 its second and will probably go for $2 million this year.

Part of that will come from about $65,000 billed to Concert 10 for Saturday's affair. Still, Alley said the raceway concert was the most successful he had ever been a part of from a financial standpoint.

Raceway complimented

He complimented the raceway for having a "super organization," but gave credit to the promoters' marketing ability for raking in the money to pay for the giant enterprise with plenty to spare.

Alley said his company arrived at the raceway on July 3 to find a stage partially constructed. "It was totally inadequate" for the expected needs of the concert.

Alley contacted the people who put up the Woodstock stage in New York and then put 12 men together constructing a similar structure to hold the 14 group and $200,000 worth of lighting and sound equipment needed to get the show to the crowd.

With 60 full time employees for Showco's regular staff spread out over nine productions, Alley hired labor for the stage. 20 more to set up lighting and sound and 20 to handle talent coordination on the day of the concert.

Sprinkled throughout the crowd Saturday were people wearing Showco T-shirts, checking badges, keeping rock enthusiasts from the stage area and off giant television screens erected to project the show after dark.

One problem plaguing the concert earlier in the day was the lack of access to the site. Four helicopters were supposed to be available to producers, but only two were ready early Saturday.

Alley said the mix-up meant problems getting groups to the raceway. Thick fog prevented scheduled landing of flights to the site at first. A medical team flown to the raceway at 7 a.m. concert day had to be picked up in a field adjacent to the General Electric plant in Stroud Township.

National press took a back seat to the media and talent, and the first chopper to the track was slow getting off the ground as priorities shifted and a brief dispute took place between Showco officials and the press corps.

Production went smoothly after initial problems, with only one group cancelling due to illness — Black Sabbath.

Among the other groups appearing at the track were Claire Hamill, Mother Night, Groundhogs, Ramatam, Bull Angus, Edgar Winter, Badfinger, Cactus, Humble Pie, Emerson Lake and Palmer, J. Geils Band, Faces and Three Dog Night.

Can recreation area proceed without Tocks Island?

By KNIGHT KIPLINGER

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Can the Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area be developed independently of the proposed Tocks Island Dam, in the event the dam is scrapped for environmental reasons?

As if there were not enough public confusion about Tocks already, the two federal agencies supposedly acting as partners in the Tocks region are squabbling over this question.

The Army Corps of Engineers, which is entrusted with both the construction of the dam and land purchasing for the national park, maintains that scrapping the dam would seriously jeopardize — if not scuttle — the park project.

But the Interior Department, entrusted with developing the 52,000-acre park that would surround the Tocks Reservoir, maintains that there would be no difficulty in continuing the park without the dam.

When listening to the arguments of the two agencies, the public should keep in mind that the issue is very speculative, and that each side has a vested interest in pushing its point of view.

The Corps, which is in the business of ridding other things) building dams, is very eager to get on with the Tocks project, which would be a masterpiece of the dam-builder's art.

In the face of growing public doubt about the environmental impact of the dam, the Corps seems to be hitching its wagon to the star of the national recreation area — a much more popular project, which is favored by even hardcore opponents of the dam.

Recent Corps statements linking the dam and the park in a tight bundle seem designed to use the park to force the opponents' hand.

"No dam, no park; that's the law," Col. Carroll D.

Strider told a meeting of the Tocks Island Citizens Assn.

Strider, the Philadelphia-based Tocks expert of the Corps, went on to say that "Congress would have to change that law, and that is unlikely."

The Interior Department, on the other hand, is in the business of (among other things) developing national parks.

They have a vested interest in paying the way for an orderly separation of the dam and the park, since they don't want their project to be dragged down by the beleaguered dam.

The department

acknowledges that "the law" that Strider referred to (the 1965 Congressional authorization of the park) envisioned a facility oriented towards, and integrated with, the 13,000-acre Tocks Reservoir.

But according to Assistant Secretary Nathaniel Reed, nothing in the law would specifically prevent the separate development of the park.

While Strider says the law would have to be changed by Congress, Reed maintains that the switch could be effected administratively.

In a letter to Sen. Clifford P. Case (R-N.J.), Reed said the reservoir land not needed by the Corps could be transferred as surplus to the General Services Administration, and from there to the Interior Department.

It's quite possible that Congress would object to an administrative act of such magnitude, agreeing with Strider that it should be done with a change of the 1965 law.

Strider told the Tocks Citizens meeting that it is "unlikely" that Congress would amend the law so that the park could be developed separately.

This opinion is debatable at best. For one thing, over 27,000 acres for the combined project have already been acquired, with most of it earmarked for the park.

If the dam were abandoned, it would be highly unusual for Congress to scuttle the park, too, since that would entail the mammoth task of selling all of this acreage back to private parties or to state and local governments.

There is, however, the possibility that a Congress grown sick and tired of the Tocks issue — which has already dragged on for 10 years — would decide to freeze land acquisition for the park if the dam and reservoir are ruled environmentally unsound.

You can bet, though, that the Interior Department would lobby hard for completion of the park the original size.

As a matter of fact, Reed points what he obviously considers a very appealing picture of a Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area sans reservoir.

Using the free-flowing river and isolated natural ponds, he wrote to Case, families could "have their own good time together with more privacy, freedom and seclusion that might ever have been hoped for in large complexes where the danger of differing recreational attitudes can become competitive."

Write to know

The people in The Pocono Record circulation area have a "Write to Know" — and The Record will try to provide the answers in the "Write to Know" column. The column, designed to answer any questions or solve any problems (consumer, government or anything else) will appear every Monday on the first page of the second section. Send all questions to "Write to Know," The Pocono Record, 511 Lenox St., Stroudsburg, Pa. 18360. Questions should be in writing and signed. No telephone calls, please.

Q. — My husband works in New York City and travels back and forth to the city each day. A friend of his said he could claim a deduction from his income tax for the tolls he pays crossing the bridge each day. Is this true?
Mrs. L.D., Columbia, N.J.

A. — Yes, it is. The Internal Revenue Service accepts claims of this type as deductible. If your husband pays cash to cross the bridge or tollway each day he should get a receipt from the bridge attendant each time. If he purchases commuter tickets, he should save the empty books. They act as receipts in themselves. There may also be other associated costs of traveling back and forth to work that are deductible. You should contact a certified public accountant or your nearest IRS office to find out what is deductible and what is not. The money saved each year through the services of a CPA could very well be worth the service fee in your husband's case.

Q. — Could you please print the veteran's story of a deck of cards being his Bible?
Mrs. F.W.H., East Stroudsburg

A. — We assume you mean the story of a young private who was brought before his commanding officer for playing cards during church services. Due to its length we cannot print it in this column. However, there is a record you can order from your nearest disk shop entitled "The Deck of Cards," which is the story you refer to. It's quite a country-and-western classic and you should have no difficulty in obtaining a copy.

Q. — I would like to know exactly what the Head Start school is and the purpose of it. I have been told two different stories.
M.H., Stroudsburg

A. — Since the answer to your question is too lengthy to print in this column, Mrs. Joanna Weaver, director of the Head Start program at the East Stroudsburg State College Campus Learning Center has agreed to fill you in on the program. She can be reached at the CLC any weekday between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Every few weeks, the Consumer Information Service, a youth group from the Stroudsburg Methodist Church, surveys prices at five local supermarkets. (Giant, Acme, IGA, A&P in Stroudsburg, and Victory in East Stroudsburg.) The results of these surveys are printed in a bi-weekly bulletin, which is distributed free to anyone who wishes to have a copy. If any persons would like to obtain a recent survey, they are asked to submit a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Consumer Information Service, Stroudsburg Methodist Church, 547 Main Street, Stroudsburg, Pa., 18360.

Hospital gets share

EAST STROUDSBURG — The General Hospital of Monroe County received approximately 15 to 20 persons Saturday who had sustained injuries at Pocono International Raceway's Concert 10. One was reportedly stabbed.

Two other major injuries, both unconfirmed by hospital and Concert 10 officials, were alleged broken backs suffered by persons climbing scaffolding at the raceway to view the concert but had fallen.

Other injuries treated were cuts from broken glass, broken fingers, arms and ankles. Most of the broken limbs were suffered by gate crashers who leaped to the ground from atop the high fence that surrounds the raceway.

A report from an unofficial source on hand at the hospital said the stabbing victim supposedly inflicted the wound himself during an argument with his girlfriend.

All patients treated at the hospital were flown from the raceway grounds by helicopter. A problem was created after the patients were treated and released, for they had no way of returning to the track to get their cars.

After many repeated pleas, the helicopter returned a few to the area, but others had to find a way back the best they could.

Concert crowd swarms over Raceway

By SKIP TAGGART
Pocono Record Reporter
LONG POND — It was 5 a.m. Saturday at the tunnel road leading to the infield area of Pocono International Raceway. Groups of four and five Concert 10 goers began arriving at the gate to assure themselves a good stagefront seat.

The groups grew steadily larger and larger until it was impossible to discern them from each other. It became a long procession. First hundreds, then thousands, then...

Security personnel scrambled along the fence trying to catch those who had climbed over without turning in a ticket. According to Raceway General Manager Bill Marvel, most of the fence climbers had tickets — but didn't want to wait at the gate and lose the chance of a good spot in front of the stage.

Farther up the tunnel road some people were running toward the stage area to accomplish the same end, dropping shirts, coats, bedrolls and other belongings along the way. No one turned back to retrieve them. They had to get a good seat.

The sun was still partially hidden behind the morning clouds and the fog was just beginning to burn off. It was impossible to see where the stage was set up from the tunnel exit and many people were running in the wrong direction.

Stage surrounded
Soon the skeleton-like silhouettes of the lighting scaffolds began to roll out of the murky morning and the stage blossomed on the horizon like a Morning Glory. It was surrounded by thousands of festival fans, many already asleep on their blankets.

As the sun pierced the haze the landscape began to come alive with motion. From a distance it appeared the grassy infield of the track was actually breathing.

The gray-green motion slowly began to take on colors: denim blue, pink, purple, white, red and olive green.

Dirty, weary faces atop the kaleidoscope became visible and the sounds of building excitement began stabbing through the eerie quiet which had camouflaged the size of the crowd all morning.

By 9 a.m. the sun was shining brightly on an ocean of humanity, growing larger by the minute. Rivers of people flowed through the entrance gates like sand cascading into a huge hour-glass. Throughout the day — until the rain came — that hour never ended.

Hungry fans, many who had nothing to eat for as long as two days, swarmed upon the concession stands. On one side of a pizza vending truck hundreds waited to fill their empty stomachs.

On the other side of the truck, a young man was selling LSD for those who wished to empty their minds. Business was good on both sides of the truck.

Drugs for sale
Drugs were readily available to anyone who wished to venture into the chemical festival which accompanied the music. Cries of "skag for sale, uppers and downers for those in need," and "you can't hear the music without mescaline" filled the air as the drug hawkers unabashedly marketed their wares. There was no visible effort made by security or law enforcement personnel to arrest them.

The vendors took their toll. The Drug Help Center in the garage area began receiving a steady flow of overdoses, bum trips and people suffering from convulsions. Bad or impure "acid" being sold in the crowd was blamed in part. Inexperienced users made up many of the rest.

Semi-uniformed veterans raised makeshift flags of peace, identification and ecology over small patches of ground they had conquered. An American flag, upside-down in the sign of national distress, whipped lazily in the slight breeze. A sleepy sentry stood watch underneath.

When the music began shortly after 1 p.m., the crowd in front of the stage

roared with approval. It was the beginning. Thousands of young people who had traveled from as far away as Florida and California to Long Pond as if it were their Mecca were about to be rewarded for their efforts. Deeper in the crowd there was lesser excitement but a visible interest in the stage. In the fringe areas there was outright complacency about the whole thing.

A rip-off?

A sampling of crowd reaction showed most of the 10,000 to 15,000 people with positions in front of the stage were enthralled with Concert 10. Those farther out had doubts about the $11 price they paid for their tickets and many said "this is the biggest rip-off I've ever seen."

Later in the afternoon it began to rain and the temperature dropped into the low 60s. Stage crews covered the sound equipment with plastic and the fans were told to stay; the concert would resume when the rain stopped. In the tunnel beneath turn two of the 2.5 mile Pocono tri-oval, a 17-year-old girl from Massachusetts stood soaking wet and shivering. She stared blankly at her ticket stub which read "rain or shine." After muttering a four letter word that reflected her contempt, she said "I'm going home." Thousands followed her.

They met head-on with other latecomers who were still trying to get to the raceway to find what it was all about. After being told, one of the travelers said, "I paid $11 for my ticket and hassled eight hours of —ing traffic to get here. I don't know where I left my car but I'm not gonna leave now, man."

A bone-weary Pennsylvania State Policeman, who had been trying to direct traffic near the raceway for 16 hours, asked "Where did they all come from?" The best answer he could get was, "From everywhere, man. Everywhere."

Many fans abandon cars; traffic snarls seal area

Pocono Record Reporter

LONG POND — Cram about 200,000 people, more than three times the entire population of Monroe County, into about 600 acres and what have you got? Concert 10. Another good answer would be problems; big problems.

One of the first to materialize was traffic congestion. It defied description. Cars were backed up from the Rte. 115 interchange of Interstate 80 west to a few miles from Scotrun, some 13 or 14 miles, from Friday night until well into Saturday morning.

Even New Jersey suffered from the calamity at Long Pond. Traffic in the westbound lanes of I-80 and Rte. 46 in the Garden State was reported backed up from the Delaware Water Gap bridge to Budd Lake. Transportation between New York City and the Poconos could only be called a fiasco.

It all began at approximately 8 p.m. Friday along Rte. 115 and Long Pond Road near the Pocono International Raceway where Concert 10 was held. Music fans exhausted by the tedious drive through all the traffic evidently felt they had gotten close enough to the track to walk in, rather than stick with their autos and park in a designated area.

Cars began parking along the roads wherever they could find room at any angle. Long Pond Road was the first to become blocked when cars met an impasse and could not back out because of more behind them. Concert goers abandoned their autos in the middle of the road and walked miles to the raceway.

Some local residents were also caught and had no choice but to lock up and walk home. Pennsylvania State Police, unaware the road was closed, kept directing traffic through the artery. By the time they realized what had happened it was too late.

Autos abandoned
It was only a matter of time before the same thing happened to Rte. 115. State police also became trapped in the tie-up and could not get to the places where people were abandoning their cars and order them to keep moving.

A patrol car from the Hazleton barracks attempted to rendezvous with troopers in the area to furnish much needed radio equipment and other traffic control supplies. The car reached the Rte. 115 intersection on Rte. 903 via Lake Harmony, but no one could get through to pick up the supplies. After hours of waiting, it turned back.

Fate sealed
When darkness moved in it sealed the area's fate. Fans, unfamiliar with the area but lucky enough to make it to the raceway with their cars, either ignored or failed to see posted directions to the parking area.

They knew they were at the raceway and that's all they cared about. Most just stopped anywhere and looked for a place to set up camp. When the sun came up Saturday it revealed the parking lot was far from filled, but there was no way to gain access to it anymore.

Late Saturday night portions of Rte. 115 were reopened as concert goers began the long trek homeward. Many of the autos parked along the sides of the road left and permitted traffic to skirt around abandoned vehicles.

Tow trucks finally broke through and pulled the empty cars to vacant lots and open fields where they were left for their owners to find. By Sunday afternoon a state police spokesman from the Fern Ridge barracks said Long Pond Road and Rte. 115 were both open and "running good." He described the weekend as "just a bunch of madness."

The Troop S. barracks in Mount Pocono reported traffic on I-80 was "heavy but moving" Sunday afternoon. There were still quite a few abandoned cars along that roadway, too.

Rock festival promoters expecting healthy profit

Pocono Record Reporter

LONG POND — The 125,000 tickets sold at $11 each for Saturday's rock music concert at Pocono International Raceway made it perhaps the best money venture of giant rock festivals yet held despite tremendous costs in promotion and production.

Concert 10, a promotion corporation sponsoring the event from New York City, was headed up by Irving Reiss of Los Angeles. Bernard Ruttenberg, a spokesman for Reiss, said the event would turn a profit despite a $300,000 outlay for talent alone.

Production for the affair was handled by "Showco," a group organized two years ago and now operating out of Dallas, Texas with nine productions going throughout the United States and Europe at the same time.

Production coordinator for Showco, David Alley, 26, has been with the group since its inception. He said Showco grossed $85,000 its first year, $408,000 its second and will probably go for $2 million this year.

Part of that will come from about $65,000 billed to Concert 10 for Saturday's affair. Still, Alley said the raceway concert was the most successful he had ever been a part of from a financial standpoint.

Raceway complimented
He complimented the raceway for having a "super organization," but gave credit to the promoters' marketing ability for raking in the money to pay for the giant enterprise with plenty to spare.

Roy funeral services set

SCIOTA — Mrs. Nina G. Roy, 24, of R.D. 5 Stroudsburg, died Friday evening in a motorcycle accident in Sciota.

Born in Fountain Hill, she was a daughter of the late James and Lena Millheim Stettler. She was a resident of Hamilton Township for the past year and a 1966 graduate of Nazareth Area High School.

Survivors include her husband, Dieter John Roy; two sisters, Mrs. Anna Castner, Washington, N.J.; and Mrs. Lena Richter, Nazareth; three aunts, Mrs. Elda Silvert, Mrs. Stella Stimmel and Mrs. Sadie Miller, all of Nazareth.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday at 11 a.m. at the Schmidt Mortuary, Nazareth. Interment will be in Forks Church Cemetery, Forks Township. Friends and relatives may call Monday at the Schmidt Mortuary after 7 p.m.

Can recreation area proceed without Tocks Island?

By KNIGHT KIPLINGER
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Can the Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area be developed independently of the proposed Tocks Island Dam, in the event the dam is scrapped for environmental reasons?

As if there were not enough public confusion about Tocks already, the two federal agencies supposedly acting as partners in the Tocks region are squabbling over this question.

The Army Corps of Engineers, which is entrusted with both the construction of the dam and land purchasing for the national park, maintains that scrapping the dam would seriously jeopardize — if not scuttle — the park project.

But the Interior Department, entrusted with developing the 59,000-acre park that would surround the Tocks Reservoir, maintains that there would be no difficulty in continuing the park without the dam.

When listening to the arguments of the two agencies, the public should keep in mind that the issue is very speculative, and that each side has a vested interest in pushing its point of view.

The Corps, which is in the business of (among other

In the face of growing public doubt about the environmental impact of the dam, the Corps seems to be hitching its wagon to the star of the national recreation area — a much more popular project, which is favored by even hardcore opponents of the dam.

Recent Corps statements linking the dam and the park in a tight bundle seem designed to use the park to force the opponents' hand.

"No dam, no park; that's the law," Col. Carroll D.

Strider told a meeting of the Tocks Island Citizens Assn.

Strider, the Philadelphia-based Tocks expert of the corps, went on to say that "Congress would have to change that law, and that is unlikely."

The Interior Department, on the other hand, is in the business of (among other things) developing national parks.

They have a vested interest in paving the way for an orderly separation of the dam and the park, since they don't want their project to be dragged down by the beleaguered dam.

The department

acknowledges that "the law" that Strider referred to (the 1965 Congressional authorization of the park) envisioned a facility oriented towards, and integrated with, the 13,000-acre Tocks Reservoir.

But according to Assistant Secretary Nathaniel Reed, nothing in the law would specifically prevent the separate development of the park.

While Strider says the law would have to be changed by Congress, Reed maintains that the switch could be effected administratively.

In a letter to Sen. Clifford P. Case (R-N.J.), Reed said the reservoir land not needed by the Corps could be transferred as surplus to the General Services Administration, and from there to the Interior Department.

It's quite possible that Congress would object to an administrative act of such magnitude, agreeing with Strider that it should be done with a change of the 1965 law.

Strider told the Tocks Citizens meeting that it is "unlikely" that Congress would amend the law so that the park could be developed separately.

Smith completes double Wimbledon win

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI)—Stan Smith displayed the fighting heart of a champion Sunday in blunting the deadly shot-making of Romania's Ilie Nastase to win the men's singles title and give the United States its first double at the Wimbledon lawn tennis championships in 17 years.

Smith, the reigning U.S. open champion from Sea Pines, S.C., won the 2 hour, 40 minute center court thriller 4-6, 6-3, 6-3, 4-6, 7-5 to succeed in his bid for the Wimbledon crown exactly 12 months after leaving the same court a loser to John Newcombe of Australia.

Smith's victory, coupled with the ladies singles win by Billie Jean King of Long Beach, Calif., matched the last U.S. double achieved by Tony Trabert and Louis Brough in 1955.

Mrs. King gained additional honors when she teamed with Betty Stove of the Netherlands to beat Australia's Judy Dalton and Francoise Durr of France.

6-2, 4-6, 6-3 to win the women's doubles title. The match was played on the adjacent No. 1 court in an effort to beat the weather which caused postponement of the finals for 24 hours. It was her eighth title going back to 1961 when she first won with Karen Susman.

When Nastase, a Romanian army Lieutenant, dumped a backhand into the net to give Smith the title, the 15,000 fans, who had watched with bated breath, gave the American a standing ovation. Veterans tennis goers said the match must rank as the best final seen at the club.

Smith, who entered the tournament a 11 to 10 favorite, had to survive many a rocky moment, but he hung in there and refused to give ground even when it looked as if the Romanian was about to dispatch him to limbo.

The finalists, both 25 and both serving in the armed forces, made some unbelievable returns, hit passing shots on both wings: smashed with venom: hit deep and penetrating volleys and hoisted some telling lobs. It was all text book stuff played at a brisk pace.

Nastase, a touch player who can produce the big game when needed, may consider himself unlucky not to have won the cup, but Smith won the big points when he needed them and the crowd applauded his victory.

When it was all over, and after he had been doused in champagne by his friends, including two-time winner Lew Hoad of Australia, Smith said: "In the end it was 80 per cent guts and the rest luck which got me through."

Smith was at his best in the fifth game of the final set. He raced to 40-0 and appeared comfortable. Seven deuces later, during which time he saved three break points, he held service by playing a courageous drop shot which lifted the chalk.

Nastase, who had been unhappy about the stringing of his rackets throughout the match, also played bravely. He saved two match points in the 10th game and another in the 12th before he put a backhand volley into the net when standing on top of it and going for the angle. It was a tired stroke.

The end came suddenly. Nastase raced to 40-0 and was smiling. He had Smith under pressure and was happy with the way things were going.

Smith then hit a forehand service return for a winner. A doublefault—his fifth—followed, then Smith drove a brilliant backhand crosscourt return to deuce. A forehand return to Nastase's feet gave him match point for the third time. Nastase saved this by punching home a forehand volley, but a forehand played across court again put Smith within a point of victory. Nastase's muffed backhand followed to signal the end.

As the ball fell into the net, Nastase threw his racket down and started muttering something in Romanian. He was gesticulating when Smith, minus his racket, arrived from across the net to embrace his beaten opponent. They walked arm-in-arm to the umpire's chair, then Smith broke away to blow kisses to the crowd and soak up the moment of his triumph.

Nastase, who looked as if he was about to blow his cool during the second and third sets, suddenly began to put it together in the fourth. He broke to 15 with three glorious passing shots in the ninth game and then wrapped it up in the next to 30.

Nastase broke at love for 2-0 in the third, lost his delivery for 2-1 and then was broken again in the sixth and ninth games.

There were five service breaks in the first six games of the second set before Smith managed to hold for 5-2. He served a love game in the ninth to level at a set all.

'Guts, luck' factors in Wimbledon win

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI)—Weary but triumphant Wimbledon victor Stan Smith assessed his victory as "In the end 80 per cent guts and the rest luck."

He admitted at a post match news conference that the five set thriller could have gone the other way.

Smith, of Sea Pines, S.C., saluted his final opponent Ilie Nastase as a very tough opponent whose temperament in this tournament had been the best he had seen from the volatile Romanian.

Stan thought that Nastase had more natural talent than Australia's John Newcombe who beat him in another five set final last year.

"Newcombe does not hit as many great shots as Nastase but also he does not miss as many," Smith said.

When he came into the news conference Smith was saturated both from sweat and champagne. Jubilant friends, including former Wimbledon winner Lew Hoad, had doused him in the dressing room.

Still wheezing a little, from 160 minutes of battle, Smith grinned crookedly to the newsmen: "It was never in doubt."

Once seated, however, Smith admitted that he had been really worried in the fifth set.

He agreed that the fifth game had been crucial. In this game he dribbled away a 40-0 lead and had to survive three break points in seven deuces as his backhand faltered.

"I thought then that if I got the first service in I had the advantage but it didn't go in," Smith said. "I did get a little disgusted with myself. But I was awfully lucky."

In moment of crisis like that one, Smith said: "I basically slow myself down and take a couple of deep breaths."

"In situations like that you don't hurry and try to get it over with."

"It's a question of concentrating on the job in hand and not worrying about the mistakes you make."

After he had lost two championship points in the 10th game of the final set, Stan thought that his chance for victory might have gone.

In the 12th game when Nastase was 40-0 on service the American had resigned himself to having to serve again.

"But I won all those points and suddenly it was over."

Smith had drawn confidence from Nastase's frequent racket changing during the match.

"If you keep on changing rackets you obviously haven't found one that suits," said. "In a big match you kind of look for an excuse to rationalise losing."

Stan felt the brilliant Romanian had the sympathy of the crowd with him at certain points but this had not affected his game.

Richard Petty

Petty will be driving his 1972 STP Dodge and serving as chief mechanic for Richard will be his brother Maurice. The winningest driver in NASCAR's history, Petty has won 145 races and in 1971 became the first stock car driver to ever top the million dollar earning mark.

Currently, Petty, whose father Lee won the first Daytona 500 in 1959, is shooting for his fourth NASCAR title and he is the only three time winner of the Daytona 500, having won that famed classic in 1964, 1966 and 1971.

Pennsylvania 500 to feature Petty

POCONO — Richard Petty, the National Association of Stock Car Auto Racing king who is the all-time money winner of that association and the nation's most popular stock car driver, will be taking on the United States Auto Club's finest stock car drivers July 30, it has been announced by Bill Marvel, Pocono International Raceway's manager.

In making the announcement, Marvel said "Being able to announce Richard Petty's entry for the July 30th Pennsylvania 500 immediately after announcing the big two-day weekend of 500 mile racing with the postponed Schaefer 500 at Pocono on Saturday, July 29 and Pennsylvania 500 on July 30, is like getting an extra serving of dessert."

"Now, in addition to offering the public the biggest weekend of racing ever presented, we are able to offer our patrons the finest in both championship and stock car racing ever presented. We are looking forward to having Richard Petty battle the USAC contingent for the major share of the nearly $100,000 purse and are expecting some of Petty's NASCAR cohorts to join him at Pocono."

Pair grabs spots on Olympic team

EUGENE, Ore. (UPI)—Tom Hill, former Arkansas State star now in the Army, and 1968 Olympic gold medalist Willie Davenport took advantage of a poor start by world record holder Rod Milburn Sunday to grab Olympic berths in the 110-meter high hurdles on the windup program of the U.S. Olympic Track and Field Trials.

Tom Gage, Al Schoterman and George Frenn finished 1-2-3 in the hammer throw to join Hill, Davenport and Milburn as the latest members of the 1972 Olympic team.

Hill, the only man to beat Milburn in the last three years, barely edged Davenport in the high hurdles as both were caught in 13.5.

Milburn, who appeared to have slipped in the blocks, barely saved third and the final Olympic berth in 13.6. Charles Rich of UCLA was fourth, also in 13.6.

The 29-year-old Gage, a chemical engineer at Baton Rouge, La., won the hammer throw at 229 feet, 11 inches. He's a former Cornell star.

Schoterman, the N.C.A.A. champ from Kent State, finished second in the competition with a best throw of 225-5, which came on his last attempt, while Frenn, who has a best this year of 231-5, finished third at 224-7.

Shut out in bids for their fifth consecutive Olympic berths were Al Hall and Hal Connolly. For Connolly, it meant he will stay home and watch the children while his wife, Olga, goes on to the Olympic Games as a member of the U.S.

Gage was eligible to compete in the trials in 1968 at South Lake Tahoe but his father died before the competition started and he scratched.

It will be different this time, he promised, as he tuned up for Wednesday's start of the 101st renewal which has a special significance for the big, blond American.

But Nicklaus, chasing the "impossible dream" of all four major golf championships in the same season, hopes the result will be the same.

Nicklaus rifled towards victory in 1966 consistently preferring the No.1 iron off the tee while others, striving for the distance Jack got so easily, found trouble with their woods.

The rough had been left to grow to 2-ft in places so that the flowering stalks of grass looked like fields of wheat, engulfed wayward shots and imposed a savage penalty on the unfortunate.

"This time they've cut it a lot shorter, it's much like it was in 1959 when I played in the Walker Cup as an amateur," Nicklaus said. "I'll certainly be using the driver a lot more."

American girls track team ready, anxious for Munich

FREDERICK, Md. (UPI)—The U. S. Olympic Committee chose a women's track and field team early Sunday packed with running talent and ready to scoop up medals at Munich.

Two runners, Francie Larrieu in the 1,500-meter and Kathy Hammond in the 400-meter, and 100-meter hurdler Patty Johnson earned berths on the 27-member team after setting new American records in trials Saturday night.

"I think I've got a chance for a gold medal, I really do," Miss Larrieu said following her championship run. "I feel I can bridge the gap between American distance runners and Europeans. We've had a bad reputation, but I think I've got a chance to make a name for us."

Miss Larrieu, 19, a sophomore at DeAnza Junior College in Cupertino, Calif., clocked a 4:10.4—18 seconds faster than she did it a year ago. Her closest challenger, Francie Johnson, of Philadelphia, was 35 yards behind.

"I am capable of competing with the Europeans," she said, "but I just haven't been pushed."

Miss Hammond, 20, of Sacramento, Calif., ran the 400-meter in 51.8, breaking her own 1969 record of 52.1.

"I wasn't tired," she said, casually tossing her long brown hair. "I could even run faster. I've been running consistently, and I'm strong enough. I just had to have competition."

She said an Olympic record is within easy reach. "I've got two months to get down to it," she said.

Mrs. Johnson, of San Clemente, Calif., finished the hurdles in 12.9, breaking the 13.1 time of Mamie Rallins and Lacey O'Neal.

Miss O'Neal, who matched the record Friday night, said she and Mrs. Johnson touched during the race, knocking her off stride. But the new champion said she hardly noticed.

"So we bumped arms—no catastrophe," Mrs. Johnson said. She predicted that positive thinking and polished technique will make her a medalist.

"There's so much to be said for positive thinking," the 22-year-old housewife said. "It's 90 per cent once you have the physical capabilities."

Madeline Manning Jackson, of Columbus, Ohio, who earned a gold medal in 1968 in the 800-meter, was selected in both the 400 and 800-meter for the final team.

Iris Davis, considered the finest woman runner since Wilma Rudolph and Wyomia Tyus, was picked for the 100-meter team despite problems with an injured back.

McCluskey wins stock car race

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI)—Roger McCluskey passed pole-sitter Jack Bowsher on the 197th lap Sunday to win the Miller 200 auto race which was much slower than expected because of an unprecedented 54 laps run under the caution flag.

Bowsher, of Springfield, Ohio, led most of the race in a blue and white 1971 Ford Torino. But on the 195th lap, coming out of some caution lap time, he started having trouble with a worn tire and McCluskey, of Tucson, Ariz., passed him two laps later.

After the race Bowsher filed a protest with the United States Auto Club charging McCluskey didn't complete the 200 laps. The protest will go to USAC headquarters for a ruling.

Bowsher's tire just about gave out completely and as he crossed the finish line he couldn't complete the cooling off lap.

The race was expected to be a fast one after qualifying Saturday, which saw Bowsher set a track record of 108.456 miles per hour. But the 54 caution laps—caused by minor problems like oil on the track and bumping of cars rather than a major collision—kept the winning pace down to only 89.44 miles per hour.

Finishing third was Ramo Stott, of Keokuk, Iowa, in a 1972 Plymouth road runner; fourth was Don White of Keokuk, in a Dodge Charger; and fifth, Butch Hartmann.

Race driver killed in Illinois

Du QUOIN, Ill. (UPI)—Don Jackson, 38, Evansville, Ind., was killed Sunday when he was thrown from his car after it hit the fence during a supersprint race at the DuQuoin State Fairgrounds.

The accident occurred in the back stretch of the one-mile dirt oval during the 18th lap of a 50-mile super modified-sprint race won by Sheldon Kinser, Bloomington, Ind.

Seventeen laps of the accident marred race were run under a caution flag. Just following the restart after the Jackson accident, Bill Utz, Sedalia, Mo., crashed his racer into a guard rail on the No. 2 turn, but escaped injury. Later David Dwyer, Columbia, Mo., and Richard Rider, Dowell, Ill., suffered minor injuries during crashes on the back stretch.

Unearned runs lead Padres past Phils

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The San Diego Padres scored three unearned runs in the third inning and Clarence Gaston drove in single runs in the fifth and seventh Sunday as they defeated the Philadelphia Phillies, 5-4.

Losing pitcher Darrell Brandon opened the gates for the Padres in the third when he fielded a bunt by Bill Greif and threw wild to third base trying to get Enzo Hernandez, who had opened the inning with a single and stolen second.

Darrel Thomas singled to score Hernandez but the Phillies came up with a double play when both Greif and Thomas ended up on second base. Dave Roberts followed with a double and scored on a two-bagger by Leron Lee, who scored the third run on Nate Colbert's single.

Singles by Roberts, Colbert, and Gaston made it 4-0 in the fifth. In the seventh Gaston doubled to score Roberts.

Greif, who picked up his fourth win against 11 defeats, had a shutout until the sixth when Joe Lis homered following an error by Greif that put Willie Montanez on base. Pinch-hitter Oscar Gamble homered in the seventh and Deron Johnson connected in the eighth off reliever Fred Norman.

Pirate homers rout McLain in 7-4 victory over Braves

ATLANTA (UPI)—The Pittsburgh Pirates routed Denny McLain with an early home run barrage Sunday and went on to beat the Atlanta Braves, 7-4.

Willie Stargell led off the second inning with his 17th homer of the season and Bob Robertson hit a two-run homer in the same inning.

When Al Oliver hit a three-run homer in the third the Pirates had a 6-0 lead and that was it for McLain, who made his Atlanta debut last Tuesday in a 3-3 tie with Chicago.

Pat Jarvis blanked the Pirates for 4 1-3 innings but Manny Sanguillen hit a home run off Cecil Upshaw in the eighth for the Pirates' other run.

Nelson Brites, now 7-3, gave up seven hits including Hank Aaron's 857th career homer and a run-scoring double and a two-run homer by Oscar Brown.

San Diego's Fred Kendall takes a lesson in plate blocking from Phils' catcher John Bateman in the fourth inning, as Bateman tags Kendall out when he attempted to score on a hit by Bill Greif. Joe Lis made the throw.

Reese ties mark as Yankees win

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI)—Buck Reese tied a major league record for most pinch-hit grand slams homer in a career Sunday but the New York Yankees held on to defeat the Minnesota Twins, 9-6.

Reese homered in the seventh inning off reliever Lindy McDaniel to cut New York's lead from 9-1 to 9-5. The 373-foot homer over the right field fence scored Bobby Darwin, Eric Soderholm and George Mitterwald.

Northey of the National League for most pinch-hit grand slams in a career.

Ron Blomberg doubled in Thurman Munson and Roy White with two out in the first inning to give the Yankees a 2-0 lead.

The Yankees chased Ray Corbin in the second with three runs. Horace Clarke doubled in Celerino Sanchez and Gene Michael for two runs and San Francisco's three-run homer in the fifth inning Sunday led the San Francisco Giants to their second straight win as they defeated the Montreal Expos, 5-1.

Kingman belted his 21st homer off loser Earl Morton after Garry Maddox doubled and Ed Goodson walked. Bobby Bonds hit his 12th homer off Morton to lead off the game.

The Giants scored their other run in the third inning when Maddox singled and scored on Chris Speier's double.

Steve Stone, making his first appearance since June 19, worked five innings for the victory, his fourth in 11 decisions. He developed arm trouble and Randy Moffitt took over and allowed no hits in gaining the save.

Ron Fairly homered off Stone in the second inning for Montreal's run.

Cubs back Jenkins in victory

CINCINNATI (UPI) — The Chicago Cubs backed Ferguson Jenkins' shutout pitching with an 11-hit attack as the big right-hander blanked the Reds, 5-0 in the first game of a doubleheader Sunday.

The victory was Jenkins' 15th complete game of the season — tops in the league. He yielded seven hits, walked none and struck out six.

Jenkins also contributed a triple which touched off a three-run fifth inning.

Loser Don Gullett reeled off three straight hitless innings before the Cubs bunched two singles and a walk with a balk to take a 2-0 lead in the fourth inning.

Jenkins, now 11-7, opened the fifth with a triple but was called out for leaving third too soon after Don Kessinger fled to right field.

Otis leads Kansas City in opener

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Amos Otis drove in four runs and upped his batting average to .309 Sunday in leading the Kansas City Royals to a 6-4 victory over the Cleveland Indians in the first game of a doubleheader.

Splitter, who was lifted for a pinch-hitter in the eighth, picked up his ninth victory against four losses.

Kansas City's Cleveland

Kingman homer leads Giants win

MONTREAL (UPI) — Dave Kingman's three-run homer in the fifth inning Sunday led the San Francisco Giants to their second straight win as they defeated the Montreal Expos, 5-1.

Kingman belted his 21st homer off loser Earl Morton after Garry Maddox doubled and Ed Goodson walked. Bobby Bonds hit his 12th homer off Morton to lead off the game.

The Giants scored their other run in the third inning when Maddox singled and scored on Chris Speier's double.

Steve Stone, making his first appearance since June 19, worked five innings for the victory, his fourth in 11 decisions. He developed arm trouble and Randy Moffitt took over and allowed no hits in gaining the save.

Ron Fairly homered off Stone in the second inning for Montreal's run.

Osteen hurls six-hitter as Dodgers defeat Mets

NEW YORK (UPI)—Claude Osteen pitched a six-hit shutout as the Los Angeles Dodgers defeated the New York Mets, 2-0, Sunday.

The Dodgers scored in the first inning on consecutive singles by Lacy, Bill Bruckner and Willie Davis.

The Mets' biggest threat against Osteen came in the fifth inning when Duffy Dyer led off with a double and Teddy Martinez walked. Garrett's

Lolich wins 14th in split

CHICAGO (UPI)—Tom Haller, who earlier had a triple and a double, slammed a two-run 450-foot homer with none out in the ninth inning Sunday to help southpaw Mickey Lolich post his 14th win of the year as the Detroit Tigers whipped the Chicago White Sox, 4-2, after dropping the opener, 5-4.

Haller's homer off loser Tom Bradley scored Aurelio Rodriguez, who laid down a perfect bunt along the third base line to open the ninth. Haller had the misfortune to hit a triple with nobody out in the fifth and a double with nobody out in the seventh but failed to score both times because of teammate failures to bunt effectively.

Lolich, who has lost six games, became the major leagues' first 14-game winner. He walked two and struck out 10.

Mickey Stanley, who drove in three runs in the first game, two with a homer, exploded his second homer of the day with one on in the third to give Detroit a 2-1 advantage.

In the opener, Stanley's two-run homer in the second inning with Ike Brown on base gave the Tigers a temporary 2-1 lead. Mike Andrews tied the game for the Sox with his fifth homer of the year off starter Fred Scherman.

Both teams scored two runs in the sixth to make it 4-4. The Sox loaded the bases in the bottom of the ninth off Joe Nickro on singles by Pat Kelly, Walt Williams and an intentional walk to Dick Allen. Tom Timmerman replaced Nickro and after the first pitch, Reichardt singled over a pulled-in outfield to score Kelly with the winning run.

Unearned runs lead Padres past Phils

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The San Diego Padres scored three unearned runs in the third inning and Clarence Gaston drove in single runs in the fifth and seventh Sunday as they defeated the Philadelphia Phillies, 5-4.

Losing pitcher Darrell Brandon opened the gates for the Padres in the third when he fielded a bunt by Bill Greif and threw wild to third base trying to get Enzo Hernandez, who had opened the inning with a single and stolen second.

Darrell Thomas singled to score Hernandez but the Phillies came up with a double play when both Greif and Thomas ended up on second base. Dave Roberts followed with a double and scored on a two-bagger by Leron Lee, who scored the third run on Nate Colbert's single.

Singles by Roberts, Colbert, and Gaston made it 4-0 in the fifth. In the seventh Gaston doubled to score Roberts.

Greif, who picked up his fourth win against 11 defeats, had a shutout until the sixth when Joe Lis homered following an error by Greif that put Willie Montanez on base. Pinch-hitter Oscar Gamble homered in the seventh and Deron Johnson connected in the eighth off reliever Fred Norman.

Pirate homers rout McLain in 7-4 victory over Braves

ATLANTA (UPI)—The Pittsburgh Pirates routed Denny McLain with an early home run barrage Sunday and went on to beat the Atlanta Braves, 7-4.

Willie Stargell led off the second inning with his 17th homer of the season and Bob Robertson hit a two-run homer in the same inning.

When Al Oliver hit a three-run homer in the third the Pirates had a 6-0 lead and that was it for McLain, who made his Atlanta debut last Tuesday in a 3-3 tie with Chicago.

Pat Jarvis blanked the Pirates for 4 1/3 innings but Manny Sanguillen hit a home run off Cecil Upshaw in the eighth for the Pirates' other run.

Nelson Briles, now 7-3, gave up seven hits including Hank Aaron's 657th career homer and a run-scoring double and a two-run homer by Oscar Brown.

Reese ties mark as Yankees win

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI)—Ritch Reese tied a major league record for most pinch-hit grand slams homer in a career Sunday but the New York Yankees held on to defeat the Minnesota Twins 9-6.

Reese homered in the seventh inning off reliever Lindy McDaniel to cut New York's lead from 9-1 to 9-5. The 373-foot homer over the right field fence scored Bobby Darwin, Eric Soderholm and George Mitterwald.

Reese's third career grand slam tied him with Ron

Northey of the National League for most pinch-hit grand slams in a career.

Reese had previously been tied with Moose Skowron for career leadership in the American League.

Ron Blomberg doubled in Thurman Munson and Roy White with two out in the first inning to give the Yankees a 2-0 lead.

The Yankees chased Ray Corbin in the second with three runs. Horace Clarke doubled in Celerino Sanchez and Gene Michael for two runs and Munson singled in Steve Kline with the third run.

Sanchez singled in Bobby Murcer from second base for a 6-0 Yankee lead in the fifth inning.

After Kline retired 10 straight batters, pinch-hitter Jim Nettles led off the Twins' sixth with a double and scored on Rod Carew's single.

The Yankees scored three runs in the seventh to increase their lead to 9-1. Blomberg doubled in Murcer and White for an 8-1 lead and scored on Michael's single.

Porsche takes first place in Mid-Ohio auto race

LEXINGTON, Ohio (UPI) — Bob Beasley of Richmond, Va., and Mike Keyser of Baltimore forged ahead late and won the $20,000 Camel GT challenge race in their Toad Hall Porsche 911 Sunday at the Mid-Ohio Sports Car Course.

The victory, despite a torrential one-hour rain, was Beasley's first overall victory in the International Motor Sport Association 11-race series which he leads by a good point margin.

The pair started in 24th position on the 48-car grid, drove four and one-half hours and then took the lead.

Sam Posey of San Juan Capistrano, Calif., and Hurley Hayward of Chicago, who led most of the day, fell behind after a series of motor problems including their Porsche bursting into flames during a routine fuel stop. But they still managed to finish second, just one lap behind the winners who covered 448.8 miles at the 2.4-mile track.

Third was the Ford Escort of John Buffum of Shelburne, Vt. and Bert Everett of Philadelphia.

Trailing were the twin B.F. Goodrich Corvettes driven by John Greenwood of Pontiac, Mich., and Marshall Robbins of Troy, Mich., and by Denny Long of Sterling, Ill., and Jim Greendyke of Greenville, Ohio.

The pole sitters and early leaders Mike Murray of Toledo and Ike Knupp of Southfield, Mich., had a long pit stop to replace a broken crankshaft pulley and finished 29th in the race watched by a crowd of more than 15,000 persons.

San Diego's Fred Kendall takes a lesson in plate blocking from Phils' catcher John Bateman in the fourth inning, as Bateman tags Kendall out when he attempted to score on a hit by Bill Greif. Joe Lis made the throw. (UPI Wirephoto)

Osteen hurls six-hitter as Dodgers defeat Mets

NEW YORK (UPI)—Claude Osteen pitched a six-hit shutout as the Los Angeles Dodgers defeated the New York Mets, 2-0, Sunday.

Rookie second baseman Lee Lacy paced the Dodgers' attack against Tom Seaver with three hits, scored one run and drove in the other run.

The Dodgers scored in the first inning on consecutive singles by Lacy, Bill Bruckner and Willie Davis.

Texas beats Orioles in 10th inning, 3-2

BALTIMORE (UPI)—Joe Lovitto, who tripled in the tying run in the eighth inning, doubled home the winning run with two out in the 10th Sunday as the Texas Rangers swept a four-game series from the Baltimore Orioles with a 3-2 victory.

Lovitto lined reliever Grant Jackson's first pitch to him into the rightfield corner, scoring Toby Harrah from second base to give Jim Shelhenback, 2-4, the victory in relief. Harrah opened the 10th with his third hit, a single off reliever Eddie Watt. Ken Forsch sacrificed Watt to second base and Watt walked Dick Billings before Jackson came on to strike out pinch-hitter Tom Grieve. Lovitto's two-bagger easily scored Harrah.

Lolich wins 14th in split

CHICAGO (UPI)—Tom Haller, who earlier had a triple and a double, slammed a two-run 450-foot homer with none out in the ninth inning Sunday to help southpaw Mickey Lolich post his 14th win of the year as the Detroit Tigers whipped the Chicago White Sox, 4-2, after dropping the opener, 5-4.

Haller's homer off loser Tom Bradley scored Auerlio Rodriguez, who laid down a perfect bunt along the third base line to open the ninth. Haller had the misfortune to hit a triple with nobody out in the fifth and a double with nobody out in the seventh but failed to score both times because of teammate failures to bunt effectively.

Lolich, who has lost six games, became the major leagues' first 14-game winner. He walked two and struck out 10.

Mickey Stanley, who drove in three runs in the first game, two with a homer, exploded his second homer of the day with one on in the third to give Detroit a 2-1 advantage.

In the opener, Stanley's two-run homer in the second inning with the Tigers a temporary 2-1 lead. Mike Andrews tied the game for the Sox with his fifth homer of the year off starter Fred Scherman.

Both teams scored two runs in the sixth to make it 4-4. The Sox loaded the bases in the bottom of the ninth off Joe Niekro on singles by Pat Kelly, Walt Williams and an intentional walk to Dick Allen. Tom Timmerman replaced Niekro and after the first pitch, Reichardt singled over a pulled-in outfield to score Kelly with the winning run.

One sub could destroy 160 cities

U.S. atomic power frightening

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Just one nuclear-powered submarine carrying 16 Poseidon multiple warhead missiles could hit more cities with one strike than were hit in Germany and Japan during all of World War II.

The United States now has eight of those submarines, with 31 more on the way. With 10 warheads to a missile and 16 missiles to a sub, 160 cities could be hit simultaneously — compared to the 61 cities in Germany and 66 in Japan hit during all of the last war.

America also has 1,054 land-based strategic missiles backing up 520 bombers that could deliver nuclear bombs far more potent than those dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

Those are some of the doomsday statistics which Ambassador Gerard C. Smith — the chief U.S. disarmament negotiator — quotes to illustrate the power of the United States, and the potential disaster of world war.

Smith is occupied these days trying to win congressional approval for the arms limitation agreements President Nixon signed in Moscow May 26. The administration is confident Congress will give its approval after the presidential conventions, so that further discussions with the Russians can take place, perhaps in October.

There has been some congressional criticism, such as that from Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., who said "there are a series of nuclear loopholes as big as a 25 megaton bomb which we have to get pinned down."

So far the administration has gone out of its way to explain the intricate details of the agreement. But to leave no stone unturned Smith has been doing some private lobbying with members of Congress.

The agreements are: — A treaty to limit the United States and Soviet Union to two defensive missile sites. One hundred defensive missiles may be employed to protect a unit of each nation's land-based missiles; 100 more missiles may be assigned to protect the national capital.

— An interim agreement to limit the Soviet Union to a land-based missile force of 1,618 missiles; the United States to 1,054.

— A protocol to permit the Soviet Union to build up to 62 nuclear-powered missile submarines. The United States may increase its missile submarine force from 41 to 44.

On the face of it, the United States has conceded numerical superiority to the Soviet Union. The administration counter-argues that what is important is the number of warheads which can be delivered on target.

Since the United States has developed and deployed the MIRV — the multiple warhead whose separate parts can be independently targeted — and the Soviet Union has not, the administration feels it has preserved a strategic advantage.

By the end of the five-year life of the Interim Agreement, the United States is expected to possess 7,000 such warheads, while the Soviet Union, which is only beginning to develop a MIRV, will possess an estimated 4,000 warheads.

Here are some of the charges made by Jackson against the agreements, and the counter-arguments from Smith and others:

— The United States has gained technological momentum in its development of defensive missiles under the Safeguard system. By limiting those missiles, the United States is giving up an advantage over Soviet technology.

Counterargument: The fact that the United States and Soviet Union have agreed to limit their defensive missiles is of enormous significance. This agreement means that should one country decide to attack, the other, it can be sure its attacking missiles will get through and unleash havoc. But the attacker can also be sure that the victimized country will retaliate with its land-to-destroy missile submarines.

The United States will not be able adequately to police the current agreements because cloud cover over the Soviet Union much of the year will hinder the operation of spy satellites.

Counterargument: This subject is highly classified. But the administration considered the problem of policing the agreements with satellites and other means in-4, and undertook no agreements which it did not feel it could adequately verify.

A ring of defensive missile around national capitals will not protect Washington from ballistic missile strikes. The same is true of other cities.

Counterargument: It makes sense to take all reasonable measures to protect the nation at command center. Further, more a time of defensive missile around Washington may give protection against an unauthorized strike, or an attack by a third power.

How embarrassing!

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — Black businessman Chris McNair has a highly personal stake in Birmingham's long race relations struggle.

In 1963, his daughter, Denise, was one of four black girls who died in a church bombing.

Birmingham, once known as the nation's most segregated town — and some said the meanest town — has changed a lot since then.

Old legal barriers of segregation are gone. Blacks hold jobs once restricted to whites. Blacks hold elected offices. A few serve as law enforcement officers.

The city's economy — once stagnated by the racial strife — is moving again. A booming medical center, renowned for its work in heart surgery and other specialties, is helping to diminish some of the blue collar label of the city.

But for Chris McNair, things haven't changed enough.

Progress comes too slowly, he feels. He wants to speed the change by working, both in the black community and in the power structure — still mostly white.

In 1970 he ran for the state legislature. He was not elected but he forced a white opponent into a runoff by getting many white votes in a county which is only 30 per cent black.

Although he works closely with the so-called "power structure," he says his reason is a desire for change.

"Because somebody desires to work within the system doesn't mean he wants to maintain the status quo," he says.

It was on a "youth day" at the 16th Street Baptist Church in September, 1963, when a dynamite blast killed McNair's daughter and three other girls who were removing their choir robes after Sunday school. Thirteen other youngsters were hurt. The perpetrators were never caught.

McNair is reluctant to talk about the tragedy. He said he still has thoughts about the incident that he would rather not express, but said perhaps it was a turning point for the city.

McNair, 45, has his roots in Birmingham, and he has watched the city change.

"Let no one deceive himself," he said, Birmingham is still ultra-conservative. "There are just more of us working to make this a better place."

McNair owns a thriving photography business in one of the older black areas and just recently moved down the street into a building that he had built to his own specifications, a dream for years.

He wants to expand his interests by branching into public relations and advertising.

President Nixon recently appointed him to the state advisory committee on education and he was named co-chairman.

He helped city leaders make a presentation that won for Birmingham the title of "All-America City" last year. He has cooperated with a New York public relations firm that was given the task of improving the city's image.

But he is somewhat concerned about the public relations efforts. He fears that perhaps, at times, city leaders are more interested in a surface image improvement than in coming to grips with actual problems.

One big area that needs change is the Birmingham Police Department, McNair feels.

A new acting police chief took over this year when the former chief retired and the new man, Jack S. Warren, has been pushing for many of the changes sought by blacks. McNair hopes Warren will launch an intensive campaign to recruit more blacks as officers.

One sore point between the black community and the police has been what blacks consider unnecessary killings of Negroes by police.

Recently, several whites joined blacks in a demand for a grand jury investigation of a slaying which had been ruled justifiable by the county coroner.

"Whether the killings which have occurred were justifiable or not, blacks aren't asking to promote crime," McNair says. "They just want justice. The coroner always returns a verdict of justifiable homicide."

McNair feels too many of the changes taking place in Birmingham have come about because of federal court orders, not the good intentions of the white power structure.

"We don't do anything until the federal court up and tells us, and then we say the federal courts are bullying in," he said.

One recent court decision should make it possible for blacks to be represented from populous Jefferson County and the core city by a black. In the past, 20 House seats and seven Senate seats were filled by county-wide at-large elections, a situation which made it difficult for blacks to be elected. The federal court ruled that starting in 1974, legislators must come from individual districts.

"A lot of people thought redistricting wasn't necessary," McNair said. "But if you don't have a black senator or representative from Jefferson County or any other populous county, then it's bad."

Research, folk cure aid sun-sensitive types

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — People hypersensitive to ultraviolet rays may be able to walk in the sun for the first time in their lives thanks to a team of researchers and a Russian folk cure.

Dr. Walter J. Runge, staff member of the Department of Pathology at the University of Minnesota, suffered a severe sunburn during a trip to the Soviet Union some years ago. An elderly Russian told him to rub freshly ground walnut leaves on his skin to prevent sunburn the next time he went out in the sun.

The remedy worked, and Dr. Runge decided to find out which component of the leaves brought about the cure. It turned out to be a substance called juglone.

Now, years later, Runge and two fellow researchers have worked out a two-step method to protect persons suffering from allergic sensitivity to ultraviolet light.

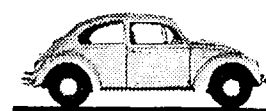

Before going to bed a person applies either a chemical sugar lotion or spray to his skin. Then, 15 minutes later, he applies lawson, a chemical cousin to juglone, used because it gives a better skin tone.

How it works

The first chemical, with the tongue-twisting name of dihydroxyacetone, reacts with the skin and liberates certain chemical groups without detaching them from the skin. The second part of the sunscreen, lawson, can now combine with these liberated groups and the combination becomes part of the skin. In essence a new top layer of skin it created which can absorb ultraviolet light.

The chemicals are applied nightly. Protection is accomplished after the first treatment and, in the majority of cases, persons who have had to shun the sun are free to swim, fish, ski. Neither water nor perspiration affect the sunscreen.

One sub could destroy 160 cities

U.S. atomic power frightening

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Just one nuclear-powered submarine carrying 16 Poseidon multiple warhead missiles could hit more cities with one strike than were hit in Germany and Japan during all of World War II.

The United States now has eight of those submarines, with 31 more on the way. With 10 warheads to a missile and 16 missiles to a sub, 160 cities could be hit simultaneously — compared to the 61 cities in Germany and 66 in Japan hit during all of the last war.

America also has 1,054 land-based strategic missiles backing up 520 bombers that could deliver nuclear bombs far more potent than those dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

Those are some of the doomsday statistics which Ambassador Gerard C. Smith — the chief U.S. disarmament negotiator — quotes to illustrate the power of the United States, and the potential disaster of world war.

Smith is occupied these days trying to win congressional approval for the arms limitation agreements President Nixon signed in Moscow May 26. The administration is confident Congress will give its approval after the presidential conventions, so that further discussions with the Russians can take place, perhaps in October.

There has been some congressional criticism, such as that from Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., who said "there are a series of nuclear loopholes as big as a 25 megaton bomb which we have to get pinned down."

So far the administration has gone out of its way to explain the intricate details of the agreement. But to leave no stone unturned Smith has been doing some private lobbying with members of Congress.

The agreements are: —A treaty to limit the United States and Soviet Union to two defensive missile sites. One hundred defensive missiles may be employed to protect a unit of each nation's land-based missiles; 100 more missiles may be assigned to protect the national capital.

—An interim agreement to limit the Soviet Union to a land-based missile force of 1,618 missiles; the United States to 1,054.

—A protocol to permit the Soviet Union to build up to 62 nuclear-powered missile submarines. The United States may increase its missile submarine force from 41 to 44.

On the face of it, the United States has conceded numerical superiority to the Soviet Union. The administration counter-argues that what is important is the number of warheads which can be delivered on target.

Since the United States has developed and deployed the MIRV — the multiple warhead whose separate parts can be independently targeted — and the Soviet Union has not, the administration feels it has preserved a strategic advantage.

By the end of the five-year life of the Interim Agreement, the United States is expected to possess 7,000 such warheads, while the Soviet Union, which is only beginning to develop a MIRV, will possess an estimated 4,000 warheads.

Here are some of the charges made by Jackson against the agreements, and the counter-arguments from Smith and others:

—The United States has gained technological momentum in its development of defensive missiles under the Safeguard system. By limiting those missiles, the United States is giving up an advantage over Soviet technology.

Counterargument: The fact that the United States and Soviet Union have agreed to limit their defensive missiles is of enormous significance. This agreement means that should one country decide to attack the other, it can be sure its attacking missiles will get through and unleash havoc. But the attacker can also be sure that the victimized country will retaliate with its hard-to-destroy missile submarines.

—The United States will not be able adequately to police the current agreements because cloud cover over the Soviet Union much of the year will hinder the operation of spy satellites.

Counterargument: This subject is highly classified. But the administration considered the problem of policing the agreements with satellites and other means first, and undertook to agree which it did not feel it could adequately verify.

—A ring of defensive missiles around national capitals will not protect Washington because submarine-fired missiles can come in low enough to elude anti-missile missiles.

Counterargument: It makes sense to take all reasonable measures to protect the national command center. Furthermore, a ring of defensive missiles around Washington may give protection against an unauthorized strike, or an attack by a third power.

How embarrassing!

Birmingham changed a lot since days of segregation

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — Black businessman Chris McNair has a highly personal stake in Birmingham's long race relations struggle.

In 1963, his daughter, Denise, was one of four black girls who died in a church bombing.

Birmingham, once known as the nation's most segregated town — and some said the meanest town — has changed a lot since then.

Old legal barriers of segregation are gone. Blacks hold jobs once restricted to whites. Blacks hold elected offices. A few serve as law enforcement officers.

The city's economy — once stagnated by the racial strife — is moving again. A booming medical center, renowned for its work in heart surgery and other specialties, is helping to diminish some of the blue collar label of the city.

But for Chris McNair, things haven't changed enough.

Progress comes too slowly, he feels. He wants to speed the change by working, both in the black community and in the power structure — still mostly white.

In 1970 he ran for the state legislature. He was not elected but he forced a white opponent into a runoff by getting many white votes in a county which is only 30 per cent black.

Although he works closely with the so-called "power structure," he says his reason is a desire for change.

"Because somebody desires to work within the system doesn't mean he wants to maintain the status quo," he says.

It was on a "youth day" at the 16th Street Baptist Church in September, 1963, when a dynamite blast killed McNair's daughter and three other girls who were removing their choir robes after Sunday school. Thirteen other youngsters were hurt. The perpetrators were never caught.

McNair is reluctant to talk about the tragedy. He said he still has thoughts about the incident that he would rather not express, but said perhaps it was a turning point for the city.

McNair, 45, has his roots in Birmingham, and he has watched the city change.

"Let no one deceive himself," he said, Birmingham is still ultra-conservative. "There are just more of us working to make this a better place."

McNair owns a thriving photography business in one of the older black areas and just recently moved down the street into a building that he had built to his own specifications, a dream for years.

He wants to expand his interests by branching into public relations and advertising.

President Nixon recently appointed him to the state advisory committee on education and he was named co-chairman.

He helped city leaders make a presentation that won for Birmingham the title of "All-America City" last year. He has cooperated with a New York public relations firm that was given the task of improving the city's image.

But he is somewhat concerned about the public relations efforts. He fears that perhaps, at times, city leaders are more interested in a surface image improvement than in coming to grips with actual problems.

One big area that needs change is the Birmingham Police Department, McNair feels.

A new acting police chief took over this year when the former chief retired and the new man, Jack S. Warren, has been pushing for many of the changes sought by blacks. McNair hopes Warren will launch an intensive campaign to recruit more blacks as officers.

One sore point between the black community and the police has been what blacks consider unnecessary killings of Negroes by police.

Recently, several whites joined blacks in a demand for a grand jury investigation of a slaying which had been ruled justifiable by the county coroner.

"Whether the killings which have occurred were justifiable or not, blacks aren't asking to promote crime," McNair says. "They just want justice. The coroner always returns a verdict of justifiable homicide."

McNair feels too many of the changes taking place in Birmingham have come about because of federal court orders, not the good intentions of the white power structure.

"We don't do anything until the federal court up and tells us, and then we say the federal courts are butting in," he said.

One recent court decision should make it possible for blacks to be represented from populous Jefferson County and the core city by a black. In the past, 20 House seats and seven Senate seats were filled by county-wide at-large elections, a situation which made it difficult for blacks to be elected. The federal court ruled that starting in 1974, legislators must come from individual districts.

"A lot of people thought redistricting wasn't necessary," McNair said. "But if you don't have a black senator or representative from Jefferson County or any other populous county, then it's bad."

"It's like this city is in a fishbowl for everyone to see," he said.

Research, folk cure aid sun-sensitive types

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — People hypersensitive to ultraviolet rays may be able to walk in the sun for the first time in their lives thanks to a team of researchers and a Russian folk cure.

Dr. Walter J. Runge, staff member of the Department of Pathology at the University of Minnesota, suffered a severe sunburn during a trip to the Soviet Union some years ago. An elderly Russian told him to rub freshly ground walnut leaves on his skin to prevent sunburn the next time he went out in the sun.

The remedy worked, and Dr. Runge decided to find out which component of the leaves brought about the cure. It turned out to be a substance called juglone.

Now, years later, Runge and two fellow researchers have worked out a two-step method to protect persons suffering from allergic sensitivity to ultraviolet light.

Before going to bed a person applies either a chemical sugar lotion or spray to his skin. Then, 15 minutes later, he applies lawsone, a chemical cousin to juglone, used because it gives a better skin tone.

How it works

The first chemical, with the tongue-twisting name of dihydroxyacetone, reacts with the skin and liberates certain chemical groups without detaching them from the skin. The second part of the sunscreen, lawsone, can now combine with these liberated groups and the combination becomes part of the skin. In essence a new top layer of skin it created which can absorb ultraviolet light.

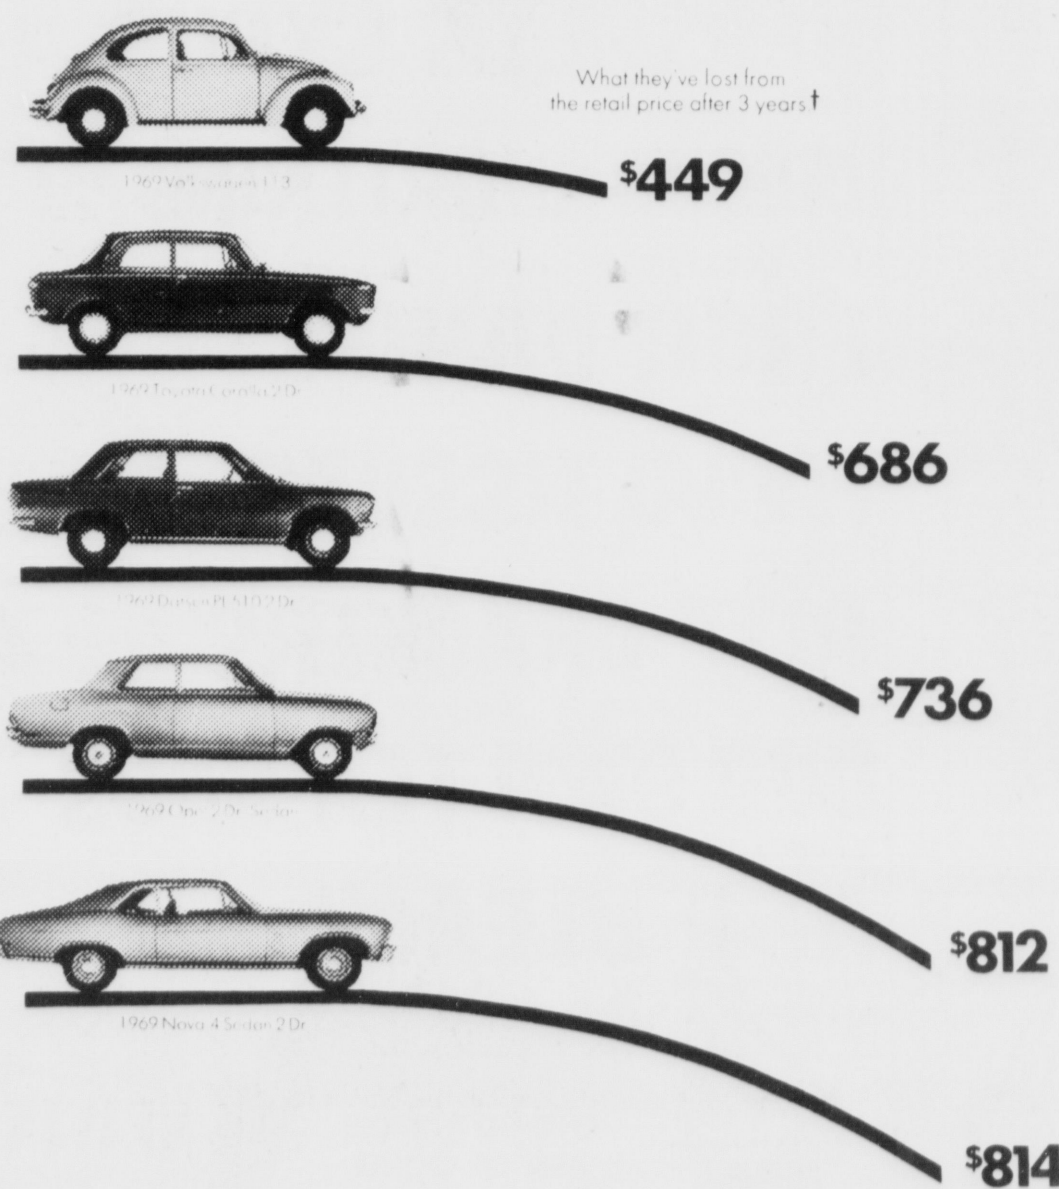

The chemicals are applied nightly. Protection is accomplished after the first treatment and, in the majority of cases, persons who have had to shun the sun are free to swim, fish, ski. Neither water nor perspiration affect the sunscreen.

No parking

By Jean Adams

PARKING: (Q.) I have dates with many girls and I always show them a good time. My problem is that after we go where we are going that night, I want to take the girl parking.

Is it wrong to take a girl parking if you really want to go?

A Boy Who Wants To in Alabama

(A.) Yes. Parking is dangerous.

There is the first danger that you and the girl might do something that you would be sorry for later.

There is the second and greater danger that somebody out for money or kicks might do something to her or you or both of you that you or your survivors would be sorry about later.

VISITING: (Q.) I'm not given any freedom. I'm not allowed to go to a friend's house without coming home and getting yelled at. Don't you think a teenager or 16 should have a little freedom once in a while? I don't smoke or drink or take drugs, and I always come home at a reasonable hour.

Yelled At Female in Utah. (A.) A 16-year-old boy or girl should have freedom along with responsibility. Ask your parents to set up specific rules for your visits to your friend's homes.

The rules should include a provision that your parents will know at all times where you are and when you will be home. They should also consider frequency of visits so that you will not be in danger of imposing on your friends.

When the rules are drawn up, follow them. In this way you will convince your mother and father that you can be trusted.

Harris poll shows McGovern's strengths, weaknesses

By LOUIS HARRIS

As a result of his striking string of primary victories, Sen. George McGovern is now a familiar figure to 75 per cent of the nation's electorate. For example, 67 per cent of the voters admire the South Dakota Senator for having "the courage to say what he thinks even if it is unpopular," up from 63 per cent who felt that way in May. By and large, McGovern evokes a positive response from most voters.

However, the bitter primary struggles have not left his public image untarnished:

— The number of voters who agree with the statement that "McGovern deserves credit for being against Vietnam before others" is 50 per cent, while 29 per cent disagree. This latest division is not quite as good as the 54-21 per cent positive split McGovern enjoyed in May.

— By 45 to 23 per cent, voters give the South Dakotan high marks for being a "fighter for tax reform who wants to help the working man." In May, however, the public agreed with the same statement by a larger 48-14 per cent.

— By 42-34 per cent, voters feel that McGovern has a "sincere, appealing personality," but this is down from the 46-26 per cent margin he showed in May.

— By 38-34 per cent, a slim plurality believes that George McGovern "stands for the right kind of change in the country." This question was not asked in previous Harris Surveys.

Thus, with the exception of public admiration for his courage to be outspoken, Sen. McGovern did not materially improve on the initial positive impression he had made on the electorate in the latter stages of the battle for the nomination.

At the same time, some of the negative aspects about the South Dakota Senator have been increasing:

— The most striking reversal has been over the charge that McGovern has "too extreme, liberal views." At latest count, by 41-33 per cent, a plurality of the voters agree with that statement. Back in May, by a narrow 33-31 per cent, a plurality disagreed with the same statement. This switch illustrates a damaging turn to the McGovern cause.

— By a slim 39-38 per cent, voters agree with the statement that McGovern "does not inspire confidence as a President should." Back in May, by 36-33 per cent, voters rejected that criticism.

— However, by 38-36 per cent, another small plurality disagrees with the charge that "McGovern wants to change things too much." This question was not asked in May.

— And, by 43-32 per cent, voters now disagree with the criticism that George McGovern "has a flat, uninteresting personality." However, in May, a larger 45-28 per cent took exception to such a statement.

— Finally, by 48-28 per cent, the public denies the claim that McGovern is a "one-issue man — only Vietnam." On this score, he has improved since May, when the public disagreed with the one-issue image by a lesser 43-28 per cent.

Basically, after a tremendous surge forward in both public recognition and respect from April to May, the McGovern impact has slowed down on the positive side and new doubts crept in as a result of the bitter California primary.

This trend was further reflected in the trial heats the Harris Survey conducted between Sen. McGovern and President Nixon and Gov. George Wallace on a third-party line. As reported earlier, the latest Harris Survey shows McGovern now trailing the President by a 12-point margin in a three-way race, 45 to 33 per cent, and by 16 points in a two-way race, 54-38 per cent. In May, the South Dakotan was behind by no more than five points, 40-35 per cent, in a three-way contest and by seven points, 48-41 per cent, in a two-way contest.

Pa. delegation freak of nature

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — The Pennsylvania delegation is a freak.

It was an accident caused by the new party rules, a little bit of old-time politicking and an unexpected natural disaster.

The political big-wigs are absent. And party novices — housewives, businessmen — are running the show.

Part of this new phenomenon was planned. The new party rules were designed to get more representation from the "grass roots."

In Pennsylvania, that meant that 137 convention delegates were elected in the April primary. They ran on the primary ballot alongside their name of their favorite presidential candidate. And they are compelled by law to vote for that candidate during the first delegate poll at the convention.

Mold Race's Outcome

That made sense. It gave the voters in Pennsylvania a chance to help mold the outcome of the race for the party presidential nomination.

Then came the next phase of the delegate selection process. This happened early last month when the elected delegates and members of the state committee met to select an additional 45 at-large delegates.

Gov. Milton J. Shapp took over at this point. He used his political muscle to wedge many of the party faithfuls into these delegate slots.

Shapp's biggest problem was that there were too many party faithfuls and too few delegate slots. "If we could only have half-votes like we did in the old days," former Gov. George Leader lamented in the midst of these negotiations.

In many cases, a politician who favored one presidential candidate was forced to pledge himself to another just to get a delegate seat.

When this was done, the delegation had 182 members — the maximum.

But then came the third phase of the selection process, the credentials committee hearings in Washington.

The committee decided that the Pennsylvania delegation had too few women, only 31. The delegation was ordered to add an extra 18 women.

Leader Gets Wish

Suddenly, George Leader got his wish. The delegation was forced to resort to half-votes.

It was decided that 18 of the at-large delegates, including Leader and the other party faithfuls, would have to share their votes with the 18 extra women.

The credentials committee decision was not necessarily a victory for women's liberation or the new party rules. The 18 extra women were not selected until the delegation got to Miami. Most of them were expected to be relatives or friends of the party powerful.

The final event that molded the Pennsylvania delegation was unexpected. Massive flooding, caused by Hurricane Agnes, prompted Shapp, Lt. Gov. Ernest P. Kline and the four top Democrats in the legislature to withdraw as delegates.

In the end, only a few professional politicians were left — most of them with half votes.

This left the delegation without a leader.

But it also was a victory for the chaotic 54-member state caucus pledged to George McGovern. This caucus has complained over and over again about the control of the old politicians.

Now, the burden of leadership falls on the McGovernites. It is time for them to stop their squabbling.

It is time for them to show this disorganized delegation how it can operate under these strange new circumstances.

However, there is one result in the current survey findings which might mean more in the end than all the rest: the 38-24 per cent margin by which a plurality of the voters express the view that "George McGovern stands for the right kind of change." A breakdown of the results of that question reveal a pattern of potential McGovern support that could make him a formidable contender by November. The cross section of 1,401 voters was asked between June 7-12:

"Do you tend to agree or disagree with the statement that Senator George McGovern stands for the right kind of change in this country?"

DOES MCGOVERN STAND FOR RIGHT KIND OF CHANGE?

	Agree Percent	Dis- agree Percent	Not Sure Percent
Total Voters	38	34	28
By Region
East	44	27	29
Midwest	37	39	24

Perhaps the secret of McGovern's success in the primaries was his ability to become the personification of "the right kind of change" at a time when the country clearly was ripe for this kind of challenge. Only in the South does McGovern fail to score as the symbol of acceptable change.

If he is the Democratic nominee, and if McGovern can translate the inclination of the young, independents, the college educated, Catholics, and union members into hard votes in the months ahead, the arithmetic of the election might wind up a good deal closer than it is today.

— By 38-34 per cent, a slim plurality believes that George McGovern "stands for the right kind of change in the country." This question was not asked in previous Harris Surveys.

Thus, with the exception of public admiration for his courage to be outspoken, Sen. McGovern did not materially improve on the initial positive impression he had made on the electorate in the latter stages of the battle for the nomination.

At the same time, some of the negative aspects about the South Dakota Senator have been increasing:

— The most striking reversal has been over the charge that McGovern has "too extreme, liberal views." At latest count, by 41-33 per cent, a plurality of the voters agree with that statement. Back in May, by a narrow 33-31 per cent, a plurality disagreed with the same statement. This switch illustrates a damaging turn to the McGovern cause.

— By a slim 39-38 per cent, voters agree with the statement that McGovern "does not inspire confidence as a President should." Back in May, by 36-33 per cent, voters rejected that criticism.

— However, by 38-36 per cent, another small plurality disagrees with the charge that "McGovern wants to change things too much." This question was not asked in May.

— And, by 43-32 per cent, voters now disagree with the criticism that George McGovern "has a flat, uninteresting personality." However, in May, a larger 45-28 per cent took exception to such a statement.

— Finally, by 48-28 per cent, the public denies the claim that McGovern is a "one-issue man — only Vietnam." On this score, he has improved since May, when the public disagreed with the one-issue image by a lesser 43-28 per cent.

Basically, after a tremendous surge forward in both public recognition and respect from April to May, the McGovern impact has slowed down on the positive side and new doubts crept in as a result of the bitter California primary.

This trend was further reflected in the trial heats the Harris Survey conducted between Sen. McGovern and President Nixon and Gov. George Wallace on a third-party line. As reported earlier, the latest Harris Survey shows McGovern now trailing the President by a 12-point margin in a three-way race, 45 to 33 per cent, and by 16 points in a two-way race, 54-38 per cent. In May, the South Dakotan was behind by no more than five points, 40-35 per cent, in a three-way contest and by seven points, 48-41 per cent, in a two-way contest.

Pa. delegation freak of nature

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — The Pennsylvania delegation is a freak.

It was an accident caused by the new party rules, a little bit of old-time politicking and an unexpected natural disaster.

The political big-wigs are absent. And party novices — housewives, businessmen — are running the show.

Before the week-long Democratic National Convention is over, we will know whether this new political animal can survive.

Part of this new phenomenon was planned. The new party rules were designed to get more representation from the "grass roots."

In Pennsylvania, that meant that 137 convention delegates were elected in the April primary. They ran on the primary ballot alongside their name of their favorite presidential candidate. And they are compelled by law to vote for that candidate during the first delegate poll at the convention.

Mold Race's Outcome
That made sense. It gave the voters in Pennsylvania a chance to help mold the outcome of the race for the party's presidential nomination.

Then came the next phase of the delegate selection process. This happened early last month when the elected delegates and members of the state committee met to select an additional 45 at-large delegates.

Gov. Milton J. Shapp took over at this point. He used his political muscle to wedge many of the party faithfuls into these delegate slots.

Shapp's biggest problem was that there were too many party faithfuls and too few delegate

Temporary dropouts

DAVIS, Calif. (UPI) — The University of California campus here has started a program allowing students to "stop out" of school temporarily without endangering their status.

Officials said students may pursue other activities during their leave, gain experience, or solve personal problems. They will be readmitted with a minimum of procedural red tape.

slots. "If we could only have half-votes like we did in the old days," former Gov. George Leader lamented in the midst of these negotiations.

In many cases, a politician who favored one presidential candidate was forced to pledge himself to another just to get a delegate seat.

When this was done, the delegation had 182 members — the maximum.

But then came the third phase of the selection process, the credentials committee hearings in Washington.

The committee decided that the Pennsylvania delegation had too few women, only 31. The delegation was ordered to add an extra 18 women.

Leader Gets Wish
Suddenly, George Leader got his wish. The delegation was forced to resort to half-votes.

It was decided that 18 of the at-large delegates, including Leader and the other party faithfuls, would have to share their votes with the 18 extra women.

The credentials committee decision was not necessarily a victory for women's liberation or the new party rules. The 18 extra women were not selected until the delegation got to Miami. Most of them were expected to be relatives or friends of the party powerful.

The final event that molded the Pennsylvania delegation was unexpected. Massive flooding, caused by Hurricane Agnes, prompted Shapp, Lt. Gov. Ernest P. Kline and the four top Democrats in the legislature to withdraw as delegates.

In the end, only a few professional politicians were left — most of them with half votes.

But it also was a victory for the chaotic 54-member state caucus pledged to George McGovern. This caucus has complained over and over again about the control of the old politicians.

Now, the burden of leadership falls on the McGovernites. It is time for them to stop their squabbling.

It is time for them to show this disorganized delegation how it can operate under these strange new circumstances.

However, there is one result in the current survey findings which might mean more in the end than all the rest: the 38-24 per cent margin by which a plurality of the voters express the view that "George McGovern stands for the right kind of change." A breakdown of the results of that question reveal a pattern of potential McGovern support that could make him a formidable contender by November. The cross section of 1,401 voters was asked between June 7-12:

"Do you tend to agree or disagree with the statement that Senator George McGovern stands for the right kind of change in this country?"

Perhaps, the secret of McGovern's success in the primaries was his ability to become the personification of "the right kind of change" at a time when the country clearly was ripe for this kind of challenge. Only in the South does McGovern fail to score as the symbol of acceptable change.

If he is the Democratic nominee, and if McGovern can translate the inclination of the young, independents, the college educated, Catholics, and union members into hard votes in the months ahead, the arithmetic of the election might wind up a good deal closer than it is today.
